WARSHIPS WAIT CALL TO MEXICO

The Mexican situation today reached a critical stage as a result of these developments:

1—Charlestown Navy Yard received orders to put all ships there on a war footing.

2—The American fleet in Hampton Roads, ostensibly for Europe, but actually, it is reported, only to steam about at sea and await orders by wireless.

3—It was discovered that Huerta plans a coup d'etat—to hold the regular election, see to it that no candidate gets a majority, declare there was "no election" and continue his hold on the provisional presidency.

4—The London press took a "hands off" policy toward the situation, urging the United States be allowed to work without interference.

"BACK UP UNITED STATES," SAYS PALL MALL GAZETTE

LONDON, Oct. 25.—"Back up the United States in its Mexican policy" is the tenor of an editorial published today in the Pall Mall Gazette upon the situation involving the United States and its southern neighbor. This advice is directed to the British government. The Pall Mall Gazette said:

"It is unreasonable to assume that, despite the self-denying ordinance by which he withdraws his candidacy for the Mexican presidency, General Huerta will remain dictator when the poll is declared.

"American national interests are deeply involved in good government in Mexico. Our commercial interests and those of the other European interests are small by comparison with the more vital stake of the American people. We have no complicity in any league of Europe to thwart the policy of the United States on the American continent."

"General Huerta's assurance is one which the United States might well accept. If they don't they will place themselves in wrong with the other Powers. The duty of the United States is clear—to leave to the Mexican people their choice as to their leader and then give that leader every chance for ruling."

The Westminster Gazette, a Liberal organ, argued for a "hands off" policy. It said:

"We cannot possibly take the same liabilities and responsibilities as the United States, although our not doing so constitutes no sort of hostility or criticism toward the United States. All we demand is that there be some form of orderly government in Mexico. But we cannot take any attitude which would involve us in Washington's domestic affairs."

The Evening Standard, a conservative paper, declared in favor of strict neutrality, saying:

"Our only possible attitude can be one of strict neutrality."

The Star, Liberal, says:

"We have no doubt that the Mexican situation will be cleared up without involving the United States in war with Mexico. As far as this country is concerned we want only free commerce intercourse so that we can buy and sell freely to Mexicans, and we want nothing else."

Second Boy Bandit Caught in Concord, N. H.

Wilfred Rheault, the sixteen-year-old boy, who with William Dubois burglarized the Bleachery station in Waltham and then stood off the pursuing police in a running battle, was arrested early today in Concord, N. H.

He was arrested by Patrolman Harry Woodward as a suspicious character. He carried a thirty-eight-calibre revolver and 150 cartridges. At first he denied his identity, but later, the police say, admitted it.

Rheault waived extradition and returned to Lawrence with an officer. The police say he admitted two breaks there and two in Lowell, besides the Waltham affair. He told this remarkable story of his escape after the Waltham break:

"I ran with Bill Dubois for about a mile till we came to the river. He wanted to get in the boat, but I wouldn't do it because I was sure they'd catch us. So I skipped back and in a minute I heard the shooting begin.

"I hid for a while, then got a ride toward Lowell in an automobile. As we passed the hospital I saw Bill being carried in on a stretcher. That scared me. I got to Lowell and I sold one of my guns and an overcoat I had stolen and went to Manchester on the train and stayed there all day. I came from Manchester to Concord by the last trolley last night. I was trying to get north toward Canada.

JEROME CALLS IN ALIENISTS

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 25.—W. T. Jerome, Harry K. Thaw's Nemesis, was in secret conference here last night with men whose testimony may be used to keep Thaw in confinement.

These were Dr. Robert Lamb, former superintendent of Matteawan, who resigned in September, 1911, and Dr. Austin Flint, an alienist who appeared against Thaw at all of the hearings before commissioners in New York brought to effect the prisoner's release from Matteawan.

The fourth man in the party visiting Jerome was believed to be a prominent New York lawyer who has been interested in the prosecution of Thaw ever since the slaying of Stanford White, following Evelyn's shocking revelations of the architect's depravity.

After the conference three of the Jerome party went to the railroad station and boarded a sleeping car for New York.

Raise Insanity Issue.

Jerome and another man whose identity was not known but who was thought to be the mysterious stranger left the hotel later. They entered an automobile and it was believed they were bound for Jerome's summer home in Lakeville, Ct., or for some place where they could board a New York train without being identified.

It is believed the conference was for the purpose of discussing some feasible means of raising the question of Thaw's insanity in New Hampshire. This, in the event of extradition being denied, would be the last recourse open to Jerome.

The procedure would be to have a jurist appoint a lunacy commission. Thaw would be examined as to his sanity. If found insane he would be lodged in a New Hampshire asylum.

Thaw has declared he would welcome any test of his sanity. That Jerome is ready on his way to the New Hampshire capital strengthens the belief he has some such move in mind, as the filing of the new application for extradition with Governor Felker would not necessarily require Jerome's presence.

Jerome was said to have had a serious split with Attorney-General Carmody here, with whom he has previously worked in apparent concord. He left the Attorney-General's office and went down to the office of Governor Glynn to get his desired papers in the Thaw case granted on the strength of the New York county indictment.

Thaw's New York counsel expressed disapproval of Governor Glynn's action in granting Jerome the new papers asking for extradition without first giving them the hearing they had requested in the event of Jerome's making such an application to the Governor.

No Longer a Fugitive.

Thaw is today no longer a fugitive from justice, the New York counsel declare. Members of the firm of Horn, Grossman and Vorhaus, Thaw's New York legal representatives, appeared before Judge Gavegan in section one of the New York Superior Court and entered a plea of not guilty to the charge of conspiracy in behalf of Thaw. They asked that Thaw be admitted to bail.

Judge Gavegan set the hearing for next Monday. There is no case known where bail has been refused in the case of a prisoner charged with a misdemeanor, such as conspiracy.

Jerome is expected to be on hand to oppose the acceptance of the "not guilty" plea.

ACCUSED WOMAN ON WITNESS STAND IN OWN DEFENCE

Rear Admiral Eaton's love letters to his wife—Mrs. Jennie May Eaton, whom the State accuses of slaying him and who laid bare her life story to the jury today—were read at the death trial in Plymouth this afternoon.

These letters were introduced while Mrs. Eaton was on the stand. They breathed the feeling the admiral had for the accused woman. In one letter the admiral wrote:

LOVE IN LINES TO WIFE.

"Just a line to say that I love you and am still thrilling with the thought of your loving arms about me.

"But without you, it is cold and bleak and dreary."

Out of his apparently deep love for his wife, he wrote in another:

"I need you every hour."

In other letters he sent his wife "kisses" and "hugs," and tells her of his loneliness without her. He concludes some of them with

"From your darling loving
"JOSEPH."

Mrs. Eaton told of her daughter Jones love for a Harvard student.

"They (Jane and the student) were sweethearts," said Mrs. Eaton.

The accused widow said she had made a trip to Chicago with Jane so that she could judge of the student for herself.

Mrs. Eaton told the details of the birth of Jane's baby, told of two visits of her first husband, Daniel H. Wentworth to her after her marriage to the admiral, and called her husband "a clever drug eater."

Denies Chicago "Affair."

Mrs. Eaton emphatically denied that she had "a wealthy lover in Chicago," denied that she had ever told Mrs. Bessie Burley of Washington that she did have a "lover."

She rehearsed the story of the illness and death of the baby the admiral adopted in 1908, and told of an occasion when she found a "tablet" in a cup of tea the admiral brought her. She declared the admiral was under the influence of drugs at least three times a week. She testified often the admiral was very affectionate, and that when in Washington she got two letters a day from him.

The accused woman's testimony the dramatic climax of the trial.

The accused woman created a most favorable impression by her testimony and her manner of testifying. Not once did she become excited. She was never nervous—never other than cheerful, save once when her face seemed tinged by sadness as she told of the death of the adopted baby, Joseph G. Eaton, Jr., in 1908.

Mrs. Eaton frequently sipped water from a tumbler which she placed on the roll of the witness chair. She answered her counsel's questions calmly, smoothly without reluctance, but with no show of haste. She spoke in a pleasing, low-pitched voice.

Joe smiled again and again in her testimony. Once when telling of how her husband was wont to hold the cow's tail while she did the milking, Mrs. Eaton quickly put her handkerchief to her mouth and smiled.

Listens Eagerly to Letters.

When the admiral's love letters were read, Mrs. Eaton leaned forward in the witness chair, seemingly eager to hear every word. Some of these letters sent her kisses and kisses without number, some were signed "Your loving, darling husband." The accused widow's eyes moved more left those of her attorneys as Mr. Morse read the letters.

Though Mrs. Eaton must have been conscious that the eye in the cover was upon her, she did not show it in her

HORRORS! MAN INVADES ROOM OF EMMELINE

CLEVELAND, Oct. 25.—"Get out of my room!" Get out of here quick! How dare you!"

With this outburst of indignation, delivered in true militant manner, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst jumped from bed at the Hotel Statler here this morning and drove a reporter, who sought an interview from her room. The reporter had knocked on the door. Mrs. Pankhurst had said: "Come in." The newspaper man entered.

The English militant leader was in bed, in a sitting posture. She sleeps that way, it was learned. She gave the timid reporter one look of horror and then bounced from bed and drove him from the room.

"I thought it was a woman hotel attendant," she explained. The interview lasted three seconds, but in that brief time it was discovered that the suffragettelain wears her own hair and sleeps in it and that she does not slumber in pajamas. Furthermore she sleeps till 8 o'clock in the morning. She makes an address here tonight, but the Cleveland suffragettes do not stand sponsor for her.

manner. She seemed utterly oblivious of those about her and the jammed seats where women crowded their necks or were cupped their ears to hear every word of her testimony. She talked directly at Mr. Morse, not in so even a tone that it was audible all over the room.

While she resided Dr. Gilman Osgood, who took the stand for the prosecution, took copious notes and seemed to admire Mrs. Eaton closely. Near him sat Dr. Thomas Carroll of Norwood. It was understood the latter would be called by the state in rebuttal.

Had Started Divorce Action.

Q.—Then where did you go? A.—We took a trip to Canada, visiting Montreal and Niagara Falls. His condition was pitiful; he needed to get away and have some kind of diversion.

Q.—Did you take steps to get a divorce from Mr. Ainsworth before you met the admiral? A.—Yes, sir; about a year or a half before.

Q.—After your northern and western trips, where did you go? A.—We took a cottage in Hull.

Q.—Did the children come there? A.—Yes.

LEFT BROOKLINE TO GET THE ADMIRAL AWAY FROM CLUBS

Q.—Where did you go after leaving Hull? A.—As we wanted the children to go to school we found a house in Brookline.

Q.—Did you know up to that time the admiral's financial condition? A.—No, sir, I did not.

Q.—He never told you? A.—No, sir.

Q.—How much rent did you pay for the Brookline house? A.—It was a fourteen-room house and we paid $72.

Q.—How many servants did you keep? A.—We had two servants and when Dorothy was sick we had an old lady who came two weeks in the Spring and two weeks in the Fall.

Q.—How long were you there? A.—Exactly seven months.

Q.—What was the occasion of your leaving Brookline? A.—The admiral had no occupation; he was drinking hard and spending much of his time at the clubs.

Q.—What were these clubs? A.—The Algonquin, the Army and Navy and the Somerset.

Q.—During your stay at Brookline did any bills begin to come in? A.—Yes, they came pouring in. I made up my mind to see him away.

Q.—Were those bills presented by trades people? A.—Yes, they came from everywhere—some of them from Washington, some of them were ten years old.

Q.—Did you have or know of improper conduct of the admiral while you were in Brookline? A.—Yes.

Q.—Relate the circumstances? A.—While June was having some dresses made by a seamstress.

Q.—Relate the circumstances?

Accused by June.

Mrs. Eaton then told of two occasions when the admiral had attacked June, the first time in the house when June was having dresses fitted and was alone up stairs and again when June and the admiral went for a walk. June, according to Mrs. Eaton, came back soon after they started, but hysterical and in tears and accused her stepfather.

"I said to the admiral," continued the witness, "Joe, ain't you ashamed of yourself? He said that he didn't know what he was doing, and I don't think he did."

Q.—Was he willing to leave Brookline and go to the country? A.—No, he did not want to go.

Q.—Did you or the admiral either one or you have any money? A.—No.

Q.—Did the admiral sell some land in Iowa? A.—Yes, sir, he sold a gravel bank for $800.

Q.—What did he do with the money? A.—I paid off $300 worth of bills that he owed and $500 went into the house at Ashland that we had bought.

Q.—Did you find some bills remaining unpaid in Boston when you left Brookline? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you find some bills that the admiral had charged without your knowledge? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was it? A.—Lace dress.

Q.—How did you happen to come to Ashland to buy a farm? A.—Why, I read an advertisement of the farm and went down to see the company having it for sale.

Q.—Where did you go? A.—Admiral and I went down first to Squantum; then to Norwell and found this place, which we bought.

Lived Very Simply.

Q.—All the money you had was the admiral's retired half-pay? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You and your mother had talked over some bills that were owing? A.—Yes, and they figured $18,000 when we left Brookline.

Q.—How did you live at Ashland? A.—Very simple indeed. Our grocery bill was not $20 a month.

Q.—What did you bring to Ashland?

Q.—Were you married at that time? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Had the admiral spoken to you about marriage? A.—Yes, he said it would be the best thing for us.

Q.—When did he speak about it first? A.—He had told me the same thing in Washington.

Q.—When was your divorce granted? A.—Some time in July.

Q.—Did you go to Chicago for the divorce papers? A.—Yes, that was at the same time we took the Niagara trip.

Q.—How long after your return were you married to the admiral? A.—Not very long after; at the Park Street Church.

A.—I brought three hens and a rooster, the extent of our live stock.

Q.—When did you move into the house? A.—The last day of August, 1907.

Q.—Now state the amount of stock on the farm. A.—Really nothing. I bought four hens, a cow, several books and did all I could to help his wife.

Q.—How old was Dorothy? A.—She was nine or ten, and June thirteen or fourteen.

Q.—Did you have any servants? A.—No, sir.

Q.—You yourself worked outdoors a lot, didn't you? A.—Yes, sir.

Drew Pay Twice a Month.

Q.—Now, Mrs. Eaton, during the time beginning when you came to Ashland to the admiral's death, how much did the admiral draw? A.—He drew $187 the first of each month and $187 on the fifteen of the month.

Q.—Was this used to pay off indebtedness? A.—If the admiral had lived up other year we would have been out of debt and a little money in the bank.

Q.—How much had you paid on debts? A.—Thirty-three hundred or thirty-five hundred dollars on $18,000 worth of bills.

Q.—What was the admiral's condition? A.—Very bad. I didn't believe he'd live over a year. He spurted him off for six months; then I got him so that he only took a drink in the morning and one at night. At last I got him so that for twenty-two months I don't believe he took enough to stagger once.

Mr. Morse then showed Mrs. Eaton a book and called attention to several items that would help to identify the handwriting, which she said was her own.

District Attorney Barker was consulted and the items were admitted. This was one entry:

"On May 19, 1912, a birthday gift of $100 was paid on a mortgage on the house."

Mrs. Eaton said, "The admiral always wanted to give me $700 on my birthday."

Mr. Morse—Now, these other entries begin on October 18, 1912, and continue until March, 1913, and at the end more page paid in full.

Planned to Pay Off Mortgage.

Mrs. Eaton said that this was the way they had intended to free themselves from debt; that the dates in the books were the dates that she intended to pay off the mortgage.

Q.—State what you did outside around the farm? A.—I fed the chickens, did the incubator work and milked the cow. The admiral held the cow's tail to her leg while I milked.

Q.—Is this testimony the spectators smiled and Mrs. Eaton put her handkerchief to cover a smile.

Noticed Signs of Drugs.

Q.—Was there any reason for deception in adopting the child? A.—Yes, idle curiosity of neighbors and possible endeavoring to the admiral if the child bore his name.

Q.—Did the admiral write a press notice about the birth of a child. A.—Yes, and without my solicitation.

Q.—Now, at any time previous thereto, did you notice the admiral under the influence of some drug or intoxicant other than whiskey? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Very often? A.—No less than three times a week.

Q.—How did it manifest itself? A.—His eyes were set and I would go up to him and say, "Joe, wake up!" Then weight be no odor to his breath and frequently he would like me on the check; he was completely stupified and could not comprehend what he saw and frequently had to lie down for hours.

Q.—Do you recall any occasion of him bringing you a cup of tea? A.—Yes.

Q.—When was it? A.—Shortly after the baby came to us.

Q.—Tell us about it, please? A.—I was ill in my room and the admiral asked me if I wished to have some breakfast. I replied "Yes," and he prepared me a cup of tea and poured it to me. I had a chain and locket about my neck and I suppose it was by a mistake that the locket interfered with the cup. Then I noticed a tablet which looked to me like potash. I looked again to make sure I was not mistaken.

Baby in Perfect Health.

Q.—Did you call the admiral's attention to it? A.—I did.

Q.—Tell us about the adoption of a son and your reasons? A.—I wanted a little boy, and realizing that I couldn't have one by him. I thought that the admiral would be a great help to the child. I saw that the admiral was getting restless again and thought perhaps that if he had a sweet little child it would take his thoughts from other things.

Q.—What were the first steps? A.—I wrote Dr. Blanchard, explaining the kind of a child we wanted and he helped us obtain one.

Mrs. Morse offered the probate record to show the adoption of the child on April 7, 1909, the child's name being Earl McQuarrie Hewitt. The name was changed to Joseph G. Eaton, Jr.

Coming down to the trip to the Sand Hills, Mrs. Eaton was asked who went there, and replied: "The admiral, Dorothy and June, baby and I."

Q.—What was the condition of the baby up to this time?

Mrs. Eaton's face took on a pleased expression as she answered:

"He had blossomed out into a beautiful little boy; a perfect little man. He was 'cooing' all the time and never had to take any medicine."

"I put the baby in a little white hammock that we had and tied it in with three fastenings. I then went away for a few moments. When I got back, I found the fastenings undone, and the bottle of milk, which was not there when I left. I took the baby out. It vomited. The admiral had not answered my questions at that time. We talked the baby's sickness over and I decided to take it to see a doctor. The admiral would not help me, and walked as leisurely as though he were going to a matinee. He did not appear willing to walk at all—he did not seem willing to go. I was compelled to push the carriage the whole distance—about a twenty-five-minute walk."

Q.—When you got to the doctor's what did you do? A.—I was afraid that the admiral had done something to the baby and told the doctor so. "I will give you $1,000 if you will save its life," I said.

Q.—Did the doctor give you anything for the baby? A.—He gave me some medicine which the admiral was determined to possess, but I would not let him have it.

Q.—What was the condition of the admiral? A.—He was under the influence of some kind of drug.

Q.—When you returned from the doctor's, did you push the baby carriage? A.—No, the admiral helped me, that seemed to feel better after some whiskey he had taken.

Q.—After the baby died what was done with the body? A.—We got a little casket and carried it by automobile to the cemetery.

Q.—Where did you go after this? A.—Returned to the Sand Hills so that I might take advantage of the bathing of which I was very fond.

Q.—Can you tell us whether the admiral read the funeral services over the body? A.—No, I cannot say as to that. I cannot remember.

Q.—Then, Mrs. Eaton, you wrote a letter to the doctor?

Mr. Morse then produced the letter and read some brief passages from it.

A.—Yes.

Q.—Was this the first letter you had ever written concerning the admiral's condition? A.—Yes, to my best recollection.

Went to Weymouth to Visit June.

Q.—Did you believe these statements about his deceiving everybody else, but not you? A.—I certainly did.

Q.—Where did you go from the Sand Hills? A.—I went to Weymouth for awhile, as I wished to be where I could visit June for her studies.

Q.—Did the admiral accompany you? A.—No.

Q.—Did he visit you frequently? A.—Yes, every Tuesday that I was there. He never failed once.

Q.—Did the admiral write you very much? A.—With a smile. The admiral was drunk enough to stagger once.

Mr. Morse then showed Mrs. Eaton a book and called attention to several items that would help to identify the handwriting, which she said was her own.

Then Mr. Morse offered letters in evidence that Mrs. Eaton received in Weymouth. These were read by Attorney Morse.

Here are some of the abstracts:

"Dearest Jennie:—

"I cannot promise to come to you Saturday. Have a man coming to see me and worst of all I have no money. Of course it is out of the question. Thank you for your lovely letter.

* * *

Dorothy received the book alright.

* * *

I posted to you your money order from Brockton. I think of you as shut in this gloomy weather. The house is running smoothly and economically, but it is lonely without you.

* * *

Just a line to say that I love you and am still thrilling with the thought of your loving arms about me. But without you it is cold and bleak and dreary.

* * *

Everything is already, but a home without a mistress is a poor place at best. I need you every hour.

Q.—How long did you stay in Weymouth? A.—About three months.

Tells of Washington Trip.

Q.—Then you went back to Assiniput and stayed there the rest of the time? A.—All, excepting two little trips.

Q.—What were of those trips to Washington? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—While you were there, did you stay at the home of Mrs. Bursey, one of the witnesses who testified here? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Was June with you? A.—Yes.

Q.—And while there, did she give birth to a child? A.—Yes.

Q.—While there did you receive letters from the admiral? A.—Yes, I received two letters every day.

After a conference between District Attorney Barker and Attorney Morse and Judge Aiken, the jury having been excused, Mrs. Eaton was taken from the witness stand. She rose from her former seat behind the bar enclosure, just behind her lawyers.

Read Letters "in Chambers."

Mr. Morse and District Attorney Barker then went over to the jury, which had been recalled, and read two letters of unprintable nature in a whisper. The letters were then admitted as evidence.

The letters came from Admiral Eaton to Mrs. Eaton while she was in Washington and is in Assiniput.

Mrs. Eaton then returned to the witness stand to continue her story.

Q.—Did you receive many of these letters while you were in Washington? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you on receipt of these letters decide to engage a nurse for the admiral? A.—I did.

Q.—Why? A.—Because I believed him under the influence of some drug or intoxicant.

Q.—Did you get a nurse in Washington before you left? A.—I did not.

A.—I thought it would be too expensive after I inquired.

Q.—What did you do? A.—I came back to Boston and, while on the train coming from Washington to Boston, I thought it would be wiser to go home with a nurse as the admiral was not himself.

Q.—What did you do? A.—I engaged a nurse in Boston named Miss Rooney to come down with me to form an opinion as to whether the admiral was and Judge Aiken objected.

Q.—How long did this nurse stay with you? A.—Only six days. "She was a sweet, nice little woman, but not clever enough for the admiral and got very tired.

"Admiral Too Clever."

Q.—Did you ever make any search for drugs during that time? A.—He used to put his hands in his pockets and then take them out and roll his fingers together. I looked in the vest but found nothing. He was too clever a dog, catec.

Q.—How long did June stay to Washington? A.—Three or four months.

Q.—Did you and June have any callers while in Washington? A.—We did not.

Q.—Where did you leave June's baby? A.—With the family of the gatekeeper at the Washington Navy Yard. His wife was a colored woman, but a good, just the sort of woman, I thought, to leave a baby with.

Q.—What sort of a house was it? A.—Not an elegant home, but a working woman's home—good and very clean—extremely clean.

Q.—How much did you have for the board of this baby? A.—$12 a month and $5 extra for clothing, clothing, etc.

Q.—Did you send the money from Assiniput? A.—I did.

Q.—When did the baby come to Massachusetts? A.—The week before Christmas, 1912, after June had married Mr. Keyes.

Mrs. Eaton told of going to Washington after the child when she heard that the child had been neglected. She said:

"When I saw Mrs. Wallace who had charge of the baby, she said that she was glad I had come because some of the neighbors were getting jealous because she was getting along so well with the money I had been sending her."

Q.—What did you do then? A.—I went to see the judge.

CHAPTER LIV.

"Our faith triumphant o'er our fears"
—LONGFELLOW.

Reporters had beseught Evelyn time and again to grant them interviews on the Thaw case. But Evelyn's lips were locked by orders of counsel.

A few days, however, after Hartridge took charge Evelyn gave an interview to Viola Rodgers, representing the Boston AMERICAN. Though Evelyn could not discuss the issues of the case, she did exchange with Miss Rodgers a deal of interesting dialogue. Evelyn began by telling her interviewer:

"In many ways this interview is agreeable to me. Heretofore my husband is willing that I should talk to you. But in many ways it is hard to talk for there are so many things which Mr. Hartridge deems it inadvisable I should discuss just now.

"I love Harry and I am working day and night in his interest. Oh dear! these law offices. What business-like places they are. I shall be coming used to cold looking rooms—the Tombs—think of me in the Tombs to see Harry. Think of Harry in the Tombs. Sometimes I think it is a dream, when I hear the music floating out from Sherry's or Delmonico's, as I sit in my rooms at the Lorraine, only a block away.

Cheerful and Patient.

"Harry is so cheerful and so patient. I wonder how he remains so. I try to make him cheerful. He feels that all will be well when everybody really knows. Dear me, it is a long time to wait for Harry's freedom—months."

A rumor that Evelyn would seek divorce from Harry had spread over the city. She was asked about this. She replied:

Does it look like it, after all I have said? That is all nonsense and Harry and I have often laughed at the absurdity of such a thing. It would be ridiculous at any time and, at this time, when he needs me the most, do you think I would desert him?

Evelyn paused a moment, looked perplexed and murmured:

"I cannot feel that anyone can misunderstand."

"Misunderstand what?" asked the interviewer.

Evelyn stammered:

"There, there. I did not mean that. Oh, well, misunderstand Harry; that is what I mean. I am sure I can say that. You see, the lawyers are so particular; they tell me not to say things. But I would like to talk sometimes. Maybe they will let me later.

Such a Summer as this is. I never did spend a Summer in town unless I wanted to, but here I must stay, and it has been so hot and lonely.

Too Busy to Be Lonely.

But, you know, in spite of being lonely, I am busy. I am going from early morning until late at night. For there is much to do. There are letters to write, telephone calls to answer, the silly visit to Harry, the lawyers to see and—oh, lots of things to do.

The lawyers tell me I have an excellent memory and would make a good witness. I am glad of that, for I only want to tell the truth and to help Harry.

Evelyn was clad in simple brown skirt, blue-and-white shirtwaist, black tie and sailor hat. The interviewer mentioned the simplicity of the costume, in contrast to the expensive garments Evelyn had been wearing as Mrs. Harry Thaw. The girl replied:

I do love pretty clothes—I always have—what woman does not? But I do not think now that I should dress as I used to. In fact, I do not have the desire to. Harry doesn't care what I wear, so long as I look proper when I see him and I always do that.

"Only a Curious Mob."

"As for the rest, it is only a curious mob I see each day in front of the Tombs—people who don't know me, but who look at me from idle curiosity. Why should I want to dress for them? I try to dress so I may not be recognized, in fact, I hate to appear conspicuous at such a time.

People have said so much and are inclined to criticise me. I sometimes wonder why. For what do they really know about me, after all. I have told none but my lawyers the real story of my life. I shall tell it to no one else until such time as they deem advisable. And then only for just one reason. You know that reason—I love Harry. Love makes anything possible with a woman—doesn't it?"

But the idea that she might not look attractive had caught in Evelyn's mind. It troubled her a bit, like it might trouble any pretty girl or woman, no matter what the situation. She looked down at her blue and white shirtwaist, adjusted her veil, then asked with a smile:

"Do I really look plain—unattractive? If I thought I looked unattractive I might put on something different. I have a few little gowns which, while they are not conspicuous, are very becoming.

Evelyn was asked which of her many, many photographs and poses she liked the best. She answered:

Tiger Rug Kimona.

"There are so many. But Harry likes the pictures I have had taken in the long ermine coat as well as any of them. I don't know but what I do, too. The ones with the hood over my head have been liked as well as any by my friends.

"Another was made of the famous tiger rug-kimona picture, which was said to have been Stanford White's favorite pose of Evelyn.

"Please, don't," said Evelyn, "that picture has been talked about so much. There are others that are ever so much more attractive, as pictures go, you know."

Asked if she had liked studio work, the girl replied sadly:

It used to be interesting. But I would never do it again. There are so many other things a woman can do and that life is a hard one—a very, very hard one—but I would rather talk of something else. You understand, I am sure.

A pink flush had crept into Evelyn's cheeks. She knew the gossip that had spread about the city regarding her studio life and her associations with Stanford White.

At this point Attorney Hartridge, in one of whose private offices the interview took place, came in and told Evelyn he had some papers he wished her to see.

Maybe he had papers and maybe he merely wished to end the interview.

Evelyn smiled in a docile way and said:

"All right. I have said only a few things and I did that only because Harry said I might."

This interview was read with utmost interest by the public. As it was Evelyn's first statement of importance since her husband slewed another man on her account, everything she had to say was eagerly scanned and discussed.

To Be Continued.

WAS EVELYN WORTHY?

Was Evelyn Nesbit Thaw worth saving?

Gertrude Atherton, the novelist, say that she was not and declares that the life of a genius—Stanford White—was needlessly sacrificed.

Here are some more opinions of AMERICAN readers.

"Evelyn an Example."

There can be but one answer to this question. Evelyn was worth saving. I admit that Willie was needlessly sacrificed, but do not agree with the statement that Evelyn was not worth saving. She can be a power of good in this world, if for no other reason than being an example to other young women who are in daily peril. Young women can readily understand that the life of Evelyn Thaw is not the proper life for them to follow.

MRS. HENRY BRESNAHAN.

"No Place in Society."

Those who defend Evelyn base their arguments upon sentiment. Sentiment should not enter into this discussion. There is but one issue in the case—Was Evelyn worth saving? I say no. I have never met Evelyn, but I am sure that ninety per cent. of the people in this country would not care to associate with her. Can anybody cite the case of a woman with the public record of Evelyn ever being given a place in society?

Evidently the popular version of society means that coterie who drink champagne and spend their time in idleness. This is not true society. Society means the average good home. How much chance has Evelyn at the present to enter one of these good homes? After considering every phase of this case I am convinced that she is not worth saving.

MEN INDICTED WITH THAW ASK SPEEDY TRIAL

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Richard Butler, formerly an assemblyman, and Eugene Duffy, two of the persons jointly indicted with Harry K. Thaw, charged with conspiracy to defeat the administration of justice, will surrender on Monday next and give bail for trial before Justice Gavegan.

Michael O'Keefe and Roger Thompson, the other alleged conspirators, it is said, will surrender here in the week and arrangements have been made for bail.

Owen W. Bohan, a lawyer, representing Butler and Duffy, said: "Butler and Duffy," said Mr. Bohan, "are absolutely innocent of any wrong doing in connection with the flight of Thaw. The rumors that they will become witnesses for the State and testify against Thaw and the alleged man 'higher up' are without any foundation.

"They demand a speedy trial, and I am positive they will not only be exonerated, but also will be awarded public credit for anything they may have done in this affair."

When Louis J. Vorhaus and Willard H. Olmstead, counsel for Thaw, made the application to Justice Gavegan to accept a plea of not guilty and to give bail for Thaw in his absence, the judge was curious to learn how Mr. Vorhaus had learned an indictment had been found against Thaw. Mr. Vorhaus said: "The newspapers are full of it."

THAW ASKS FELKER FOR 2 WEEKS' STAY IN EXTRADITION DECISION

CONCORD, N. H., Oct. 25.—Attorney Merrill Shurtleff, senior counsel for Harry K. Thaw, was busy today preparing a formal request to be given Governor Felker, asking that a stay of two weeks be granted before the chief executive renders his decision in the extradition proceedings.

The stay is asked in order that time may be had in which to investigate facts concerning the indictment returned by the Grand Jury in New York County, especially with reference as to how it was obtained.

Governor Felker was called up at his home in Rochester over the long distance telephone by Attorney Shurtleff, who asked if he would grant the stay. The Governor was non-committal, but suggested that the request be reduced to writing. He gave Thaw's counsel until Monday to file the formal petition.

Attorney Shurtleff also asked that he be allowed to submit further briefs in the case or given an oral hearing. "If the preference is left to counsel," he said today, "I will choose an oral public hearing."

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 25.—Fear of destruction of the Panama Canal by earthquake is groundless, according to Father F. A. Tondorf, head of Georgetown University seismograph laboratory. He said today: "I do not believe there is any possible danger to the canal from earthquakes. I base this conclusion upon the fact that the past history of Panama shows that it is free from earthquakes."

Militants Burn Two Rail Stations

BIRMINGHAM, Eng., Oct. 25.—A campaign to burn all the railway stations in England was inaugurated today by militant suffragettes. The stations at Northfield and Hagley Road were destroyed with $20,000 damage. Suffrage literature were found about the ashes. The London police were the butt of a joke. The women had threatened to place bombs in all London railroad stations. The police found several ticking instruments in waiting rooms, but found they were only cheap clocks.

The property, it is claimed by promoters, has a value of over $2,000,000. The sale of the assets will be made under the direction of a referee. Plans for reorganization are underway.

Increased Cotton Output in Report

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—A cotton report issued today by the Census Bureau shows 9,366,583 bales, counting round half bales, ginned from the growth of 1913 to October 18, compared with 41,874,296 for 1912. Round bales included this year are 60,024, compared with 41,745 for 1912. Sea Island included 30,880 for 1913; 15,960 for 1912.

Refuse to Increase Rail Rates on Brick

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—An increase in rates on brick from the Hocking, Shawnee and Zanesville groups in Southern Ohio, over the Toledo & Ohio Central and Zanesville & Western and the Kanawha and Michigan railroads, to Huntington, W. Va., was denied by the Interstate Commerce Commission today.

PRESIDENT WILSON BLAMED FOR CONDITIONS IN MEXICO

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 25.—Woodrow Wilson, not Victoriano Huerta, is regarded in official circles here today, from the dictator down, as the real author of the revolution and anarchy, the loss of thousands of lives and millions of dollars that is the sum of Mexico's political troubles.

That the President of the United States and his secretary of State, William Jennings Bryan, been willing to accord recognition to the de facto government of Huerta when recognition was first asked for there would have been no rebellion, no need to cause the arrest of the members of the Congress, no necessity on the part of Huerta for proclaiming himself dictator.

A prominent American known to be in the confidence of Huerta is the one who undertakes to point the finger of responsibility at President Wilson and Secretary Bryan.

"I am sorry to say that I must consider the President of the United States responsible for the events which have led up to the present crisis in Mexico," said Provisional Huerta," he said.

"Mr. Wilson makes demands upon Huerta," he continued, "and then, by his own attitude, makes it impossible for Huerta to satisfy them. He insists upon peace in Mexico. But we can have no peace here until the Mexican government has money enough to meet its obligations. It is almost superfluous to say that everybody knows Mexico cannot get credit in Europe without the recognition of the United States.

"The Huerta government has been recognized by eighteen nations and I am confident that if the United States had recognized the Mexican government at the time when recognition was asked peace would have been arranged months ago.

"The refusal of recognition has resulted in the loss of thousands of lives, millions of dollars, untold and suffering, and bankruptcy of the Mexican Government. This must continue until there is a change in the Wilson policy."

Huerta's manifesto to the diplomats, assembled in the palace at his own request, constituted the first official statement that he has made regarding his attitude toward a re-election to the presidency. He spoke as follows:

Sought Only Peace.

"The elections will be held in two days. I have called you together because I know that certain friends of mine have been thinking of supporting the Huerta-Blanquet ticket despite my public declaration that I will not accept the candidacy and General Blanquet's statement to the same effect. I wish to say right here that any votes cast for Huerta and Blanquet in the forthcoming election will be thrown out as null and void.

"I accepted the Presidency of Mexico solely to establish peace, and the government now waits to know the will of the people, which will be strictly executed. I have guaranteed and continue to guarantee to all candidates that the elections will be held with the strictest impartiality for all."

CANDIDATES WILL HAVE FULL PROTECTION AT THE POLLS

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 25.—Secret orders were sent out today to all military commanders in the Republic notifying them as to their duties at tomorrow's presidential election. After an all-night conference at the national palace between President Huerta and his cabinet the official announcement was made that all candidates would have the full protection of the government. The following coalition of General Huerta for a cooperative administration of elections, it is said the commander of the fleet has been ordered to stay within easy wireless call of Arlington.

Catholic party—Frederico Gordoa and General Eugenio Rascon.

Liberal party—Manuel Calero and Jesus Flores Magon.

Liberal Progressive party—David de la Fuente and Dr. Mendizaval.

Anti-Reelection party—Vasquez Gomez and Luis Cabrera.

Republican party—Rodolfo Reyes.

Although General Huerta has repeatedly stated a desire to be elected, his name is printed on official ballots at centers where there are strong military forces, soldiers being allowed to vote.

Vasquez Gomez is a political exile. Rodolfo Reyes and Luis Cabrera are in prison.

Huerta has invited Diaz to come to Mexico City, but Diaz refused.

Reported Diaz Shot.

Friends of Felix Diaz admitted today that he had lost all chance of election by his failure to come to Mexico City immediately after landing at Vera Cruz. The Diaz leaders have attempted to stir up a wave of sentiment for their candidate by circulating reports that he had been assassinated at Vera Cruz. Their efforts, however, have not had any effect upon the situation and a general feeling of apathy prevails.

GERMAN PRESS RAPS AMERICAN ATTITUDE ON MEXICAN CRISIS

BERLIN, Oct. 25.—The German press almost without exception, sharply condemns the attitude of the United States government toward the Mexican question. The Militar Zeitung says Germany and England, after exchanging views, both reached the decision that conditions in Mexico must be stopped, though Germany may move independently to protect her own subjects.

Count Ecterntion, a noted publicist, says: "America's hopes that Germany share its views are destined to disappointment. That Germany and England will pursue the same policy is highly probable."

FLEET WAITING ORDERS GOES TO SEA AS A RUSE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—The Atlantic fleet, which sailed from Hampton Roads today for drills, was said by navy officials to be a ruse to await further orders from the Navy Department, according to a well-defined report here. Owing to the acute condition in Mexico and the likelihood of trouble after inauguration of elections, it is said the commander of the fleet has been ordered to stay within easy wireless call of Arlington.

It is said the nine battleships—the Wyoming, Utah, Florida, Arkansas, Delaware, Vermont, Connecticut, Kansas and Ohio—will remain within 150 or 200 miles of the Virginia Capes until Tuesday.

There is a feeling that orders to proceed to Mexico will be sent within twenty-four or forty-eight hours. The entire armament has been coaled and provisioned, and ammunition shipped for the fleet. All available cruisers are on the Atlantic with quantity extras.

Deny Warning to Powers.

Reports that the United States intends to warn the powers to keep their hands off Mexico met with complete denial at the State Department today. Acting Secretary of State John Bassett Moore said:

"I know nothing about any such note or communication. As far as I know, no such note has been sent or is being prepared."

Secretary of the Navy Daniels issued neither hasty nor other orders and long sent to American warships in Mexican waters to convey the President Moore cruise out of Vera Cruz harbor, where she was lured under the guns of the Mexican garrison at Sacrificios.

He asserted that he ordered and had sent to United States war vessels in Mexican waters during the past week.

The situation today was so serious that Secretary Bryan left for Philadelphia to participate in the dedication of the restored Congress Hall. The President also decided to leave now instead for a four days' trip to Mobile, Ala., to address the Knights of Columbus convention.

That no important developments are expected while the inauguration ceremonies are in progress here is indicated by the action today of the Executive heads of the three departments which actively control Mexican policies. Secretary Bryan left for Philadelphia, Secretary Daniels for Mobile, and Secretary Lane would accompany the President to Mobile, leaving Assistant Secretary Breen to remain in Washington.

Views Departing Fleet.

The only evidence that there is some anxiety still over the Mexican situation was the fact that Mr. Bryan decided not to go to Mobile. Acting Secretary of War Breckinridge went to Hampton Roads this morning to view the departure of the Atlantic fleet for Texas.

John Bassett Moore, counselor of the State Department, was practically the only government official left here with whom to confer in connection with important developments in the Mexican situation.

HUERTA WILL NOT MOLEST RIVALS, SAYS LEGATION

PARIS, Oct. 25.—Assurances that General Huerta has no intention of arresting General Felix Diaz or any other Mexican presidential candidate were given today at the Mexican legation. Senor de Lachicotte, the Mexican Minister to France, announced that he had received the most complete photographic proof that Felix Diaz is not under arrest, and of the great double ovation given to Huerta when he made his entry into the capital. He stated that the message explained that Diaz had been detained for transportation.

Saves Horses Mired in Aquarium Bogs

Two horses, valued at $1000 each, were rescued from drowning today in the rear of the Aquarium, after being mired in the deep mud of Dalton Place. Because of the city Public station, with a crowbar and rope drew the horses from the mud in which they were mired. Contractors are building a new wing adjoining the three parcels in the rear of the Aquarium. While engaged in this work the horses in one of the panels John Wales, driving a big carry-all, became frightened at the noise and duly galloped into the bog.

Policeman Stops Runaway Horse

Scores of pedestrians escaped injury from a fast-maddened runaway horse in the vicinity of Church and Boylston streets today. The horse was captured by Patrolman A. J. Sullivan of station 16 who threw himself in front of the runaway and succeeded in getting a grip on its reins. Although dragged a full twenty feet by the horse, the fearless officer held on, and escaped with only a few minor

"READ DR. WILEY IN GOOD HOUSEKEEPING"

—HARRY P. CASSIDY.

Get a copy of the November Good Housekeeping Magazine, out October 25, and read the story Dr. Wiley tells of his experiences with ex-Presidents Roosevelt and Taft, opposing him in his fight for pure food. Mr. Cassidy tells you today briefly the point of the story.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

In a most wonderful story showing how food dopers have reached out successfully for the influence of two Presidents in their campaign to poison, cheat and swindle the people, Dr. Harvey W. Wiley tells the tale of saccharin in Good Housekeeping for November.

I advise everybody to get a copy and read this marvelous story. It uncovers the hugeness, the immensity of the food dopers' evil influence. It shows they will stop at nothing to attain their nefarious ends.

And it shows better than anything have ever seen or read the really grand stand Dr. Wiley made for pure food in the face of tremendous odds.

Dr. Wiley had banned benzoate of soda. He was trying to put saccharin, a poisonous drug never intended for food, in the same class. President Roosevelt at the time was for pure food.

But the lobbyists of the food dopers, in the language of the street, "got him." Dr. Wiley was called to answer in the Roosevelt presence the dopers' claims for saccharin.

Full in the teeth of the lobby the Grand Old Roman of the pure food cause unhesitatingly threw the charge that saccharin had no food value and injured everyone who ate it.

Took Devious Course.

With characteristic impulsiveness, President Roosevelt turned suddenly and shot out, "Anyone who says saccharin is injurious to health is an idiot." Dr. Rixey gives it to me every day."

Lest the point escape you, President Roosevelt in these words unconsciously established the harmfulness of saccharin as a food. You will note he said Dr. Rixey gave it to him. He was taking it AS MEDICINE.

He was being given saccharin as a substitute for sugar, under the careful direction of a trained physician. He knew, or the doctor knew, how much he was getting of the drug.

But the public, eating foods containing saccharin as a substitute for sugar, does not know the amount it is being fed collectively. And it is not getting saccharin under the direction of a physician.

Then came the notorious Remsen Board, named after Professor Remsen, who claimed, but was not allowed the discovery of saccharin. The first ruling it made restored benzoate of soda as a preservative.

It was not so easy to OK saccharin openly. The board took a devious course. It began to feed the public it said saccharin in small quantities added to food was not injurious. It named 0.3 grain, or four and a half grains for the daily dose as not harmful, but that much equals in sweetness one-quarter of a pound of sugar. And no manufacturer would put that much into a package of food to be consumed in one day.

And a pound of saccharin at seventy-five cents goes as far as 500 pounds of sugar costing $25. Do you see the reason for its use?

Lobby Was Not Satisfied.

But the lobby wasn't satisfied. They began to influence the secretaries of agriculture, the treasury and commerce and labor. Finally, the secretarial board, who had to pass on the rule prohibiting the use of saccharin, postponed banning it for a further six months.

Then someone discovered that as physicians administer saccharin in certain diseases, saccharin could be used in food for invalids. Note these foods were never intended for normal, healthy people.

BUT THERE IS NOTHING IN THE LAW WHICH PROHIBITS HEALTHY PEOPLE FROM EATING THESE FOODS. SO ALL THAT IS NEEDED IS FOR THE FOOD DOPER TO CARRY ON HIS LABEL THAT HIS PRODUCT IS PREPARED WITH SACCHARIN—AND THERE YOU ARE. THE DOPER ESCAPES PENALTIES. THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE STANDS ON RECORD AS AGAINST THE USE OF SACCHARIN AND THE PUBLIC IS FOOLED AND CHEATED, MOREOVER, POISONED.

Dr. Wiley tells further in his story how President Taft, bulky though he had been, took the whiskey ring out of court and decided them in favor of the adulterators.

But you must read this wonderful story of the fight for pure food and public health to get a proper appreciation of it.

It is a tale of a glorious stand, as glorious as any hero on a battlefield, of one lone man against the most powerful business and political interests in the country.

It took a Bull Run to make an Appomattox. The Alamo brought Mexico a ironclad. And though the food dopers temporarily won over Wiley, saccharin is in disfavor. As he says himself, "Maybe the days of saccharin as a sweetener are done."

Music Lovers Hear Sibelius' Symphony

Dr. Karl Muck Ably Reads Finnish Composer's Work.

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

The Fourth Symphony of Sibelius was performed for the first time in Boston by the Symphony Orchestra yesterday afternoon. It was the first real novelty of the season, and had been awaited with some interest.

Like many modern symphonies it proved intolerably long, and its length due to endless reiteration of a limited number of ideas, caused many to overlook considerable that was meritorious in it.

Sibelius is a Finnish composer, a man who speaks with a loud, harsh voice through all orchestras. He is a complete scorist, and he sees to it that every desk in the orchestra shall have something to do every minute, even if it sometimes conflicts with what some other set of instruments are performing.

The Fourth Symphony could hardly be described as pretty, dainty, haunting, bright, entertaining or witty. As a means to give Symphony audiences a good time it is a dismal failure. There's the word, Dismal. There is something dismal, melancholy, masterfully sorrowful in this symphony. It has its moments of grandeur of magnificence, of mirth, hard and sardonic, even of dance, but its impression is dismal. Vigorous orchestration, extraordinary harmonious distinguish it.

For the rest there was a merry suite of Dances from Gluck, Handel's concerto for strings and two wind instruments, and a lurid Hugo Wolf Symphony.

The orchestra was in good form, and Dr. Muck did his best to read the jawbreaking syllables of Sibelius with clearness and intelligence. I'll wager he would have delighted the composer.

Metcalfe Angry at Canal Plan Defeat

Hearst Papers Get Credit for Trip of Garrison to Panama.

By WILLIAM HOSTER.

PANAMA, Oct. 25.—The Panama Journal gives credit to the Hearst papers for the hurried trip of Secretary Garrison to the canal. The same paper, having referred to Governor Metcalfe as the spokesman of President Wilson, receives a sharp rebuke from Governor Metcalfe, denying that he speaks for the President.

Governor Metcalfe, in his communication to the newspapers, speaks of the plan—the one that would upset Colonel Goethal's ideas for the permanent organization of the canal—as his, Metcalfe's own plan. He says, strangely, that the plan is a private document though forwarded through official channels.

Continuing, the Governor denounces the publication of his plan as a breach of confidence. The inference is that the plan is bad, and he hopes to get indorsement at Washington in advance. The publication in the AMERICAN let the cat out of the bag.

Used Tobacco Over 46 Years!

HAS NOW QUIT FOREVER

All Desire Gone and He Doesn't Even Think of It Now

The photo is that of Mr. J. A. Hill, a highly respected citizen of St. Lawrence County, N. Y. After many years of tobacco using (mostly chewing) and after having spent fifty dollars for so-called "cures," he got a certain book which gave him valuable information about how to get rid of the habit quickly and easily. He followed the information and now all desire is gone.

GAINED 56 POUNDS.

One of the oldest established grocers of Seattle, Mr. H. M. Sherwood, says he had a smoking record of 36 cigars daily average. That he was in bad condition is hardly necessary to explain. He got the free book, followed the information; now he is done with the tobacco habit, has gained 56 pounds in weight, health improved wonderfully.

SNUFF HABIT CONQUERED.

Mrs. E. Barnes, an estimable lady of Mays Landing, was able to rid herself of all desire for snuff, and now she feels very much better. Many others have done likewise through the information obtained from the free book.

WILL SEND BOOK FREE.

The above are but three out of legions of cases that might be cited. If you are addicted to the use of tobacco in any form—pipe, chewing, snuff, cigars or cigarettes—don't wait another day, but write to the author, Edward J. Woods, 544 Sixth Ave., 205 B, New York City, and he will mail the book free, in plain wrapper. It will likely be worth its weight in gold to you.

Baldwin Certain He Can Defeat Brown

Charlestown Lightweight to Challenge Winner of Ritchie and Cross Battle

By JACK CONWAY.

EDDIE MURPHY, manager of Matty Baldwin, is so confident that the Charlestown lightweight will conquer "Knockout" Brown at the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday night that he is planning to take Matty to New York immediately after the contest in order to challenge the winner of the bout between Willie Ritchie and Leach Cross, which will be decided in Madison Square Garden Wednesday night. Murphy does not believe that Baldwin is a back number and declares that he is one of the best men of his weight in the world. In discussing the matter today he said:

"Baldwin will prove too fast and strong for "Knockout" Brown in their bout at the Atlas Club. Matty defeated the slant-eyed Dutchman a year ago and I am confident that he is able to repeat. I realize that Brown is one of the toughest 135 pounders in the world as he proved when he twice defeated Ad Wolgast in no-decision contests and won over the wonderful Abe Attell.

"Matty, however, is in the best condition of his life and will be at his best when he enters the ring with Brown. Baldwin will take everything that Brown hands out without retreating a single inch and will present Brown with twice as many punches as he sends.

HAS DEFEATED RITCHIE.

"If Matty defeats Brown—and I do not know of any reason why he should not breeze in a winner—I will take him to New York in order to challenge the winner of the Ritchie and Cross bout. Baldwin has one victory to his credit over the lightweight champion, while he has also bested Cross. True, the New York doctor recently called a verdict over Baldwin on the Coast, but Cross refused to make weight for that contest and entered the ring scaling close to the welterweight limit.

"Baldwin is one of the few real lightweights in the country. He can make 133 pounds ringside easily, which cannot be said of Willie Ritchie, Leach Cross, Freddy Welsh and the other young men who believe that they are the greatest little fighters in captivity.

"I do not believe that there is a legitimate lightweight in the world who can defeat Baldwin. There are a number of welterweights who can conquer the Charlestown boy, but just now we are not anxious to join those boxers who are candidates for the welterweight championship. Matty has always been a lightweight and will remain in that class until he lays the padded gloves on the shelf for all time.

BROOKS TO BOX YELLE.

TERRY BROOKS, the New York lightweight who clashes with Fred Yelle of Taunton in a twelve-round encounter in Webster on next Wednesday night, will leave for Webster tomorrow accompanied by Tige Waldman, his manager. Brooks has been training at George Beyers' gymnasium in the West End and believes that he will defeat Yelle, who is one of the classiest 133 pounders in this section of the country.

Brooks realizes that Yelle is a clever boxer and a stiff puncher, but he says that he will show up the Taunton man if he can land several smashing right-hand blows.

BOUT FOR JOHNNY GALLANT.

JOHNNY GALLANT will return to the ring next Friday evening, when he clashes with "Kid" McDonald of Roslindale in a twelve-round contest in Pittsfield. The hard hitting Chelsea lightweight has not fought since he knocked out Al Ketchel of Bridgeport at the Atlas A. A. He injured one of his hands in that bout and was forced to take a few weeks' rest. Gallant is one of the best 133-pound boxers in the East, and will come pretty near knocking out any lightweight whom he can hit on the jaw with his famous right-hand punch.

POWERS AND BROWN SIGN.

DAVE POWERS of Malden intends to keep busy within the hemp ropes. The red-headed youth has been matched to clash with Eddie Brown of Belgium in a six-round whirls at Portland, Me., next Saturday night.

Joe Geary, the Roxbury heavyweight, and Bartley Connolly will meet in Portland tonight. A rugged battle is expected.

WALSH COMPLETES TRAINING.

JIMMY WALSH has completed training for his ten-round bout with Joe Goldberg of Rochester, which will be staged in Syracuse next Monday evening. The men have agreed to make 122 pounds at 6 o'clock Monday. Walsh and Goldberg have both fought Johnny Kilbane and are expected to put up a fast, hard battle, replete with brilliant boxing.

Diem Loud in Praise of Yankee Athletes

BERLIN, Oct. 25.—A campaign to arouse interest in the Olympic games to be held in 1916 has been inaugurated by Carl Diem, general secretary of the Olympic games. In a lecture Herr Diem told of the recent trip to the United States and of the athletic commission of which he was a member. He described with unmixed praise athletic conditions in the United States and said they were an example for Germany. James W. Gerard, the American ambassador, was the guest of honor.

Schoolboy Sport Notes

At a meeting of the English High School track team final preparations were made for its cross-country run. English has always been prominent in this sport.

* * *

Captain O'Connor of Brookline High will be out of the lineup today when his team plays Pomfret School. He sustained back bruises in the Latin game.

* * *

A unique program is offered by Boston College at the Dunbar Avenue grounds November 1. The Boston College eleven will entertain Worcester Tech, while the High School will clash with the strong St. John's Prep eleven.

* * *

"Chet" La Roche is giving a good account of himself at Exeter. He played on Dorchester High last year.

* * *

Meade of English has been reinstated by Coach O'Brien and will start in the game against Everett today. He was suspended for his failure to show up at practice.

* * *

Arlington High has again shown its superiority in the ball and dale games. Gaylord Goldsmith is still living up to his reputation.

* * *

Wunderlich and Adams are two fine cross-country runners. They should prove good acquisitions to some college team when they graduate from Arlington.

* * *

Young of Boston Latin is an aggressive player. He is always in the game and fighting his hardest. Such men are valuable.

* * *

"Dutch" Bold, the former Everett High star, is registered at Georgetown this Fall.

* * *

Brockton High has a good man in Emery. He carries the ball well and plays an excellent defensive game.

* * *

"Buck" Sweetland and Johnny Murray, the former Everett stars, will play for Lawrence Academy today against Mechanics Arts.

Cochran Orders a Cup Defender

Alexander Smith Cochran of Yonkers, N. Y., a member of the New York Yacht Club for nine years, has ordered a seventy-five foot sloop yacht for the defense of the America cup. William Gardner, the designer of many fast racing yachts, has been commissioned by Mr. Cochran to design the new boat with the stipulation that he shall not accept an order from any other yachtsman or syndicate to design another sloop for the same purpose. No other restrictions have been placed upon Mr. Gardner, who is to produce the fastest yacht possible under the present rule of a worker for the Y. M. C. A. this Winter.

Mr. GAPPENEY has done quite the handsome thing in sponsoring to President Hempstead of the Giants, for what he said about ticket speculating in the world's series.

As a matter of fact there is considerably more smoke than fire in the charges of ticket speculating at the world's series games. When the Federal League authorities, with the system they have, find it impossible to keep football tickets out of the hands of speculators what chance has the Polo Grounds management of doing so?

CONNIE MACK says he did not leave Ty Cobb off his all-star team for the reason that he did not pick one. He is quoted as saying:

"I would not pick such a team for publication, as I do not believe in stirring up trouble among players, and I think picking an all-star team is foolish business.

"If I picked such a team Ty Cobb most decidedly would have been my first choice for the outfield. I never allow personal feelings to interfere with baseball, nor do I allow them to prevent me from giving a player his just due."

THE Chicago newspapers have taken down the bars against President Murphy, of the Cubs, and are allowing him to say a few things. The talkative magnate became so obnoxious last Spring that the newspapers were forced to cross him off their list and wouldn't print a line for him. Now that he has promised to be good the conditions have changed. Murphy opens the Winter league season in Chicago by telling the "fans" that he has discovered a young pitcher who will make them forget Mathewson, Johnson, Plank, Bender et al. The pitcher whom Murphy predicts will be the sensation of the National League next season is Zabel, a recruit from the Winnipeg, Manitoba, team. Zabel joined the Cubs in the closing weeks of the campaign and pitched a couple of good games for Johnny Evers.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. G. MITCHELL

BONUSES cause more trouble between player and management than anything else in baseball. They ought to be abolished. The big leagues ought to pass a rule prohibiting any club from offering a bonus to any of its players.

* * *

A bonus is a sum of money promised by the president or manager of a club to a player "if he makes good." The bonus is, of course, in addition to the player's regular salary. Bonuses are offered as a last resort when the player and the management cannot agree on terms. The player wants more money than is offered in his contract. The management doesn't want to pay more than is offered. Finally the management says:

"If you will sign the contract at the figures named I will slip you a bonus of $500 at the end of the season if you make good." The player signs.

* * *

WHEN the season ends the player seeks the management and demands the bonus of $500. He is armed with alibis for all objections raised by the management. He has made good—in his own estimation. On the other hand the management is of the opinion that the player had a "rotten" year and it cannot see where there is any call to pay over the bonus. Result: A fierce argument and the player doesn't get his extra $500.

From that time on he is of little use of the club. He would better be traded or sold. He is sore over what he considers rank treatment.

There are many cases of this kind every year. The only way to put a stop to those bickerings is to pass a law preventing the offering of bonuses.

* * *

LAST season the management of the St. Louis Nationals promised Larry McLean a bonus of $600 if he abstained from mail, spiritous and vinous liquors during the 1913 brush.

Larry was on the wagon all season, but in the middle of the season was transferred to New York. Chief Meyers was on the injured list and Larry, by his good catching, prevented the pennant from slipping from McGraw. At the close of the season Larry wrote to the Cards about the $600 bonus. The reply came quick:

"We don't pay bonuses to players of rival teams."

Then he went to President Hempstead and received another blunt answer:

"We never promised you a bonus of $600 last Spring, because you weren't with us."

* * *

LARRY only received $500 for his share of the world's series, although he caught four games and led the Giants in batting. With two such slaps on the wrist as the loss of the bonus and the miserly $500 from the big series, he cannot be expected that Larry will prove much of a worker for the Y. M. C. A. this Winter.

Athletic Outfielder to Join the Yankees

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—President Farrell of the New York Americans said here that while one of the Athletics' outfielders was to join the Yankees, the man ultimately picked might not be Walsh.

It has been known for some time that Manager Chanbe of the Yankee was trying to get a high-class outfielder from the Athletics before the opening of the 1914 season. The choice appeared to be between Strunk and Walsh.

Chance has already expressed satisfaction with his infield, and with Cree, Gilhooley, Cook, Walsh and Walter as material, should be able to cover the outer garden in a satisfactory manner in 1914.

Wrestler Mahmout Victim of Bandits

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—Yusuff Mahmout, a Bulgarian wrestler who met a number of American mat men, including Frank Gotch, by whom he was defeated, was killed by a band of Bulgarian bandits in the mountains near Silistria, his home, according to a story told by two Turkish wrestlers who just arrived here.

Mahmout was a petty officer in the Bulgarian army during the late war, and according to their story, went to the town to draw some money to pay off the men in his command. Sixteen bandits, learning the purpose of his trip, waylaid him on his return, but because Mahmout had procured only orders instead of gold coin, they killed him. The murder of Mahmout took place three weeks ago.

Norwich Honors Murphy.

NORWICH, Ct., Oct. 25.—In honor of Captain "Danny" Murphy of the champion Athletics, a rousing parade was given by hundreds of citizens of his home town last night. The local lodge of Elks, of which Murphy is a member, presented him a life membership card.

Golf Notes

By H. P. FARRINGTON.

If Francis Ouimet were to have all the good things wished on him that inventive geniuses on the various papers have advertised as "sure things," he would be sailing around the world as a protege of Andrew Carnegie, building taxes and holding costs for John D. Rockefeller and buying engagement rings for "Steel Rings" daughters. What is next?

* * *

A sort of general opinion expressed by many at the Country Club last week while the national women's golf championship was in progress at Wilmington, Del., was to the effect that if Miss Fanny C. Osgood could come through a winner, it would prove a very popular victory. Miss Osgood has helped to make women's golf in Massachusetts what it is today, and it is safe to say that she is the most popular "Miss" playing golf in this State.

* * *

Next Saturday the annual team match between the members of the Country Club, Brookline, and Oakley will be held. At this writing there are forty-six teams signed up, and it is probable that the list of contestants will run over the century mark.

* * *

"Bob" Edgren, in his sporting comment, says that he thinks Ouimet ought to win a small tournament once in a while, to show people that he has it in him. J. D. Travers, the national amateur champion, led the qualifiers at the Columbia G. C., Washington, D. C., the same as Ouimet did at the Country Club. If Travers wins this tourney he will have gone Ouimet one better; if he loses out in the match play, "Bob" will have a chance to make a pretty simile.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 25.—On a field made somewhat soggy from an all-night rain, the Princeton Tiger meets the little "big" Green team from Dartmouth today, in the first conclusive "Big Four" game of the season.

One of the hardest duels in the history of Dartmouth-Princeton athletic relations is expected, the Green being particularly anxious to retrieve a defeat of last year, while Princeton goes on the field with the knowledge that a defeat means the loss of one of its most important games.

Green Light and Fast.

There is a difference between the two teams this year, and the two which fought it out last year. The Hanover team is lighter—and exceedingly faster. Last year it was practically the reverse, the Tiger eleven possessing all of the speed.

Such is the confidence of the Hanover men, however, that a majority of the 1,000 students who traveled to New York with the team were willing to wager 5 to 4, and even 3 to 2, that theirs was the better combination. These odds were specially snapped up, however, and as the time for the game drew on, the odds tightened slightly, becoming nearer even.

As the teams are ready to go on the field, Dartmouth appears to have one strong advantage. This is in the guard positions, the weakest point in the Princeton defence. Dartmouth's punting, too, may be expected to be better than that of Princeton's.

To make up for this, Princeton fools that in its tackles, Phillips and Ballin, they have two men who will prove troublesome to the Green, and easily able to handle the Dartmouth light backs.

Dartmouth Fears Baker.

The Dartmouth coaches are secretive to the end, and will volunteer not even a statement as to the condition of the men. It is believed that Snow, the Whitney boy, will not be seen in the line-up, although at the last minute there was some talk that he would be allowed on the field for a few minutes at least.

One man whom Dartmouth fears as much as any, is Captain "Hobey" Baker, who is reported to be in fine shape and ready for the hardest fight of the year.

Gaffney Says He Has Not Pledged His Vote

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—"I have not pledged my vote to any man," said James E. Gaffney, owner of the Boston Nationals, while discussing the opposition to the election of Thomas J. Lynch. "They must show me a better man than Tom Lynch before I will consent to join the opposition. When the league convenes in December I will cast my vote as I think best."

6,000 LIMIT TO PUBLIC AT ARMY NAVY BATTLE

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Preliminary seating arrangements for the great gridiron battle between the Army and Navy, which will be held on the polo grounds on Saturday, November 29, were announced by John B. Foster, secretary of the New York Baseball Club, today.

Seats for 41,027 spectators already have been arranged for, with the probability that enough extra seats will be provided to swell the total seating accommodations to about 41,500. Of the 41,027 seats already arranged for 35,301 will be sold at $3 each. The remaining 5,726 seats are in the 600 boxes. The boxes, which include four seats, will be sold at $100 each, or $25 per seat.

There seems little doubt that every seat will be sold. In fact publicity experts declare that even the 41,500 seats which the Polo Grounds will offer will not be enough to satisfy the demands of the sport patrons.

Though approximately 41,500 seats for the big game will be sold, it is possible that the New York baseball club only will have 6,000 seats at its own disposal. The Army already has been allotted 12,500 seats and the Navy has demanded 14,500. In addition to those seats 8,000 seats have been placed on reserve. The two branches of the service have up to midnight on November 19 to issue requisitions on the club for any or all of the 8,000 seats on reserve.

If the Army and Navy make full requisition on the 8,000 seats the club is holding in reserve then the public only will have 6,000 seats at its disposal, the two branches of the service using up 25,000 seats between them.

Harvard and Penn In Stadium Battle

Rival College Elevens Clashed on a Sea of Mud, Field in Poor Condition

By SYDE LYNES.

THE STADIUM, Oct. 25.—What resembled a small-sized naval battle more than a gridiron contest was stage din the Stadium this afternoon when Harvard and Penn State clashed on a sea of mud. Despite the fact that storm signals had been set all day, thousands of smaller individual craft bent on witnessing the battle between the two big fighting ships, gathered in the Stadium with storm flag set and everything roofed down tight to weather the storm.

The field was in frightful condition and the teams had been going at it but a few moments when a football was one of the most unusual things to be found, while the condition of the ball made a greased pig look like a chestnut burr.

The Crimson team took the field about ten minutes of three and was greeted by a rousing cheer, while the Penn State eleven with its subs, which followed soon after, was given just as hearty a cheer by it's handful of supporters from the New England Penn State Alumni, and also by the Harvard crowd. Both teams ran through formation for a few moments, and then Captains Miller and Storer had a little talk and tossed up for goals and kick-off.

BOTH TEAMS IN GOOD CONDITION.

Both teams were in first-class shape, with the possible exception of Trumbull at centre for the Crimson. He has been out of the game more or less for the past three weeks, but was slated to start today. How long he would be left was a question.

Harvard started the battle with her full quota of regulars, but the new order along the line makes it impossible to pass out much dope on what it will be able to do. The stronger side of the Penn State line will be up against Gilman, a new man, and Pennock, an all-American guard, which should even things up quite a bit. Lamb, the heaviest player on the Penn State team was not down to start the game at tackle, but he will doubtless get into the contest before it has advanced very far, and will go up against Hitchcock. Lamb tips the scales at 195 pounds, and it will be interesting to see how Hitchcock in his new position on the left side of the line, will take care of his opponent. Incidentally Lamb is a placement kicker of no mean ability, and at almost any time the Crimson may find itself forced to check a kick or two to keep its goal line safe.

"SHORTY" MILLER ATTRACTION.

THE most interesting feature of the game was the appearance of "Shorty" Miller, the diminutive quarterback of the visiting eleven. He is a little chap and weighs but 140 pounds, but his speed is remarkable, and it is said he is one of the most elusive men to tacklers that the gridiron has known for a long time. If this be true Captain Storer, in his new position at end, will have one of the hardest tests of his life, and if he can cover kicks with Miller catching he should be fairly sure of his new position. He has been several times mentioned as an all-American candidate for quarterback.

CRIMSON OUTWEIGHS PENN.

THE Crimson outweighs its opponents along the line, about six pounds to the man, Harvard averaging about 181 pounds, while the Penn Staters average about 175 pounds, despite the fact that Reboud weighs 185 pounds and Lamb, one of the tackles, tips the scales at 195 pounds.

In addition to Lamb, who may take a shot at the Crimson goal with a placement kick, Penn State has other means of attack in the person of Welty, who has done very well in drop kicking, and he may be called on to worry the Crimson in this line.

Either Miller, Clark or Berryman may be called upon to do the punting, and any one of them are good for forty yards on the average, which will put them on an even basis with the Crimson, as none of the Harvard punters have been averaging more than this.

VISITORS' RUSH LINE SPEEDY.

THE Crimson thus far this week has shown a weakness in attack, which if apparent today will militate strongly against its chances, for the visitors have a strong, quick rushline, which may be depended upon to put up a stubborn defense at all times. The weak spots on their eleven are apt to be at end.

On the other hand, Harvard has a well-nigh impregnable defense, and will have its best men back of the line to stop any bukagoo due to the forwards. Both Berryman and Welty have made a name for themselves on quick shifting plays, while the former is a fast man around end

MANY BIG GAMES ON SCHOOLBOY SCHEDULE TODAY

Two score high school games are scheduled for today. Thousands of sportlovers will flock to see the schools warriors play. Some important game will be contested, and some thrilling to thus are expected.

The most important game is the one between Waltham and Somerville, which will be played at Somerville. Waltham is the favorite, but is not over-confident. On the other hand, Somerville will go into the game with odds against them, realizing that they must fight every minute to come out on top.

Coach Dame's team is one of the strongest and fastest that ever represented the Watch City School. Both Captain Harold Johnson and Coach Dame are sure that the boys will bring home a victory.

Somerville Confident of Win.

Coach Steve Mahoney of Somerville has confidence in his charges, and expects a great deal of them. Much improvement has been shown in their daily practice, and it looks as if they have hit their stride at last. The team will be greatly strengthened by the return of Captain Anderson.

A large crowd is expected to turn out to witness the contest. About 3,000 will make the journey from Waltham to Somerville in special trains.

The next game of importance is the Newton and Wellesley, which will be played at Newton. Coach Webster's boys have been showing some real football this Fall. They have but one defeat chalked against them, that being administered by Brookline High at the first of the season.

Newton's goal line has not been crossed this year. The eleven has been one of the best that Newton has had for years. The outcome of this game will be watched with great interest.

Rindge Meets Salem.

Two teams, Rindge and Salem, neither of which have been defeated, will clash at Salem. It should be a hard contest, and some good football ought to be witnessed.

Salem High is represented this year by one of the strongest teams that it has had for years. Not since the year of 1902 has the Crimson showed such efficiency on the gridiron as the team that is representing the school this year. All of the credit is given to Harry Mahoney, the coach, as he has drilled the boys into the Dartmouth system, that he learned when he played quarterback on the Green team several years back.

Already the supporters of the eleven look for the Crimson team to go through with flying colors in all its scheduled games, and if this is so there is talk of arranging a contest with either Haverhill or Everett for the championship of the State. The only obstacle that stands in the local team's path is the game with Rindge today and although Ray, the heavy guard, is disqualified and will be unable to play, the other regulars will be in line.

Latin School journeys to Southboro to play St. Mark's. The Boston boys ought to breeze to winners.

Brookline will go to Putnam, Ct., to battle with Pomfret, while Commerce will play New Bedford at New Bedford.

The Boston College High School team, which up to date has made a poor showing, plays Beverly High at Beverly. Mr. Henry Weinerberg, S. J., the Faculty Manager of Athletics, is in charge of the team and the practice yesterday showed signs of much improvement.

Governors at Game.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 25.—Governor Dunne of Illinois and Governor Ralston of Indiana will occupy an especially built box at the annual Indiana-Illinois football game today. The odds on the betting slightly favor Illinois. It is expected that the largest crowd that ever witnessed a football game in Indiana will attend.

Yale Must Watch the W. & J. Forward Pass

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Oct. 25.—Washington and Jefferson will bear close watching in its game against Yale here today. The visitors are well trained in handling the forward pass and on a wet field may work havoc with the Elis. Spiegel and Braden have been very successful in working the pass.

The team is a veteran combination and Yale will do well to make two touchdowns and escape being scored upon.

Two of the strongest members of the Yale rush line will be unable to play today, because of slight injuries to centre rush Billy Martling and tackle Pendleton White, first substitute centre, is out of the game for the season because of scholarship technicalities. The line-up selected follows:

Left end, Avery; left tackle, Talbot; left guard, Ketcham; centre, Caldwell; right guard, Maulsbe; right tackle, Wurtz; right end, Arbuckle; quarterback, Cornell; left halfback, Cornell; right halfback, Rowe; fullback, Wilson.

Important Games in South.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 25.—The Southern football season of 1913 will swing into its full stride today, when eleven representative aerial leading teams of colleges and universities will clash on the gridiron.

Good Teeth and a Pretty Smile as Beauty Essentials

Miss Held's Smile and Her Pretty Teeth

By ANNA HELD

Heading "Anna Held's All-Star Variete Jubilee," Under Management of John Cort.

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

HAVE you the courage to smile? I do not ask, "Have you the disposition to smile?"—for every woman has the disposition to smile.

Every woman has the knowledge that a smile radiates light over her whole face.

And every woman smiles if only she has good teeth to give her the courage to smile and show them.

Even, white, well-cared for teeth! They add charm to a charming face. They even make you forget irregularity of feature and flaws in coloring.

Come, madame, confess, have you given your teeth the care they deserve? Ah!, mademoiselle, be warned before it is too late. Your teeth are one of your great beauty assets.

But they are perishable, they are easily flawed, and they will repay you measure for measure for either neglect or care.

Do you know one reason why the peasant women and the middle-class "bourgeoise" of my own country fade so early? It is because in youth they have sparkling girlish faces lit by smiles and flashing teeth.

Soon decay takes its toll—the teeth become yellow and broken; they fall out from disease and neglect. The cheeks become hollow when the tooth support is removed; the pretty facial curve is lost, and a smile becomes impossible.

Now the first rule to follow in caring for your teeth is to have them examined by a reliable dentist every six months. Whatever sacrifice of luxury this means, you should still adhere to this rule. A tiny cavity can be filled painlessly and cheaply—and a filling in time saves the tooth. So consult your dentist regularly and save big cavities in teeth and pocketbook.

A NECESSARY PRECAUTION.

Don't fear a toothache that is brought on by work in the dentist's chair. If visible decay starts attend to it at once. If no decay is visible or can be felt with the sensitive tongue tip, it is still a necessary precaution to visit the dentist twice a year.

Use peroxide to disinfect the mouth and lips and allow no soreness to persist in either place. Absolute cleanliness in and about the mouth cavity is as important as in every other sort of bodily cleanliness.

The teeth must be brushed with some cleansing and disinfecting preparation every morning and evening. A simple and effective combination is carbon and common coal. Powdered chalk and orris, with a little wintergreen powder to sweeten the breath, is also effective. And there are a number of reliable preparations on the market.

Use a firm toothbrush with hard bristles, unless your gums are very tender.

Brush your teeth in the direction away from the gums—up from the lower and down from the upper teeth. Brush the teeth thus in front and back. On the upper surface of the teeth use a little rotary motion.

Keep a supply of dental floss on hand—and never allow food to lodge between the teeth. Brush the teeth with clear water of the mouth temperature after every meal, and use the dental floss if necessary.

Watch the enamel for any crack or stain. This may indicate decay or damage of a sort that requires a dentist's aid.

Be careful of your diet. Sweets attack the enamel of teeth and are agents for rapid decay. Hot and cold taken with no time between to allow for gradual change of temperature will crack the enamel. The slightest crack in the enamel allows decay an entering wedge.

An overbundance of any one principle in the system is undesirable. Too much acid or too much alkaline matter will injure the teeth. The diet should counteract this. If you are a gourmet and cannot resist the delights of the menu, find out if your mouth is over-acid or over-alkaline.

For the acid mouth, bicarbonate of soda and water will make a counter-irritant mouth wash. For the alkaline mouth vinegar has been used with good results.

HER OWN TEETH

I recommend carbon and common soot as a tooth cleanser, since I have used them for years, and my teeth are white—and mine own.

And as the final aid for teeth I recommend FRESH AIR! Let us return to our beginning—a smile. Smile if you have good teeth—and smile because it is good for your teeth. It gives them a chance for the cleansing, renewing, growing power of fresh air!

So, chere amies, here is my slogan for beautiful teeth: Have the courage to smile for your teeth's sake—and have teeth that will give you the courage to smile.

How I Darkened My Gray Hair

Lady Gives Simple Home Recipe That She Used to Darken Her Gray Hair.

For years I tried to restore my gray hair to its natural color with the prepared dyes and stains, but none of them gave satisfaction and they were all expensive. I finally ran onto a simple recipe which I mixed at home that gives wonderful results. I gave the recipe, which is as follows, to a number of my friends, and they now all delighted with it. To 7 oz. of water add a small box of Bay Rum Compound, 1 oz. of bay rum and ½ oz. of glycerine. Use every other day until the hair becomes the required shade, then every two weeks. It will not only darken the gray hair, but removes dandruff and scalp humors, and acts as a tonic to the hair. It is not sticky or greasy, does not rub off and does not color the scalp. It can be prepare it at home at very little expense. Ads.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

ACT DIFFERENTLY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I've kept company with a young lady for the last year and we loved each other dearly.

The last day we were together she acted to me better than any other day before.

On the following day she sent a friend to tell me that she is keeping company with another and she doesn't care to keep company with me. How can I win her back again, as I love her?

THE heart of a maid is so perverse that you stand a better chance of winning her back by letting some other girl console you than by fretting over her. Try it.

DON'T TRY.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am seventeen. I met a man at a dance about two months ago. he cared very much for me. I have kept company with him a while, and now he leaves me and goes with another girl. How could I get him to go with me again?

LILLIAN S.

THE first evidence a girl gives that she is trying to force a man's attentions the less inclined he is to give them. Just show him you don't care. That's the way.

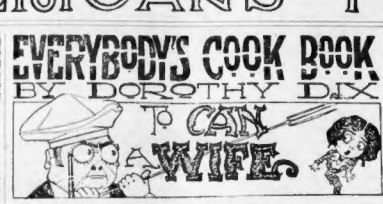
By CONSTANCE CLARKE

THE mystic reads the secrets of the East
In phantom traceries on a flaming sky,
What knows he not of mysteries unrelated;
And yet I scorn his sophistry, for I
Drink deep of a world he never knew,
For I read life within the eyes of you.
And, drinking deep, Nirvana past me slips,
I ask for Heaven and you yield your lips.

EVERYBODY'S COOK BOOK

BY DOROTHY DIX



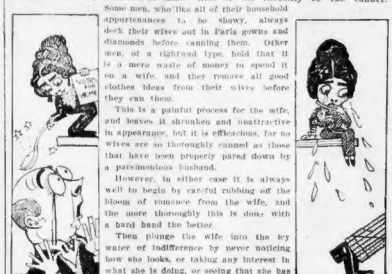
THIS dish is a great favorite with married men, and the master of the house often likes to prepare it at the table when he has company, so as to exhibit his skill before his guests.

To properly can a wife begin by selecting your wife. Go yourself into the marriage market and pick out a young and tender girl, and one who is of a timid and sensitive nature. If you can find one that weeps so much easily and is so gentle that a cross word can pierce her to the heart, so much the better. No canned wives have such a piquant flavor as the soft ones that a cruel look can bruise.

In getting a wife to can be very careful not to get a suffragist. Nobody can can a suffragist, and especially a man cannot can one.

Having chosen your wife, take it home and put it up on the shelf by its lonely, and go off about your own affairs. Spend your days at your business and your evenings amusing yourself, and don't worry about what is happening to the wife at home. This process, if faithfully persisted in, will soften down any little hard spots of character that may have naturally been in the wife's disposition. There's nothing that reduces anything, human or vegetable, to such a state of acquiescent mush, as neglect.

Whether it is better to skin a wife before canning, or to can her with the skin on, is entirely a matter of taste. Also of the liberality of the canner.



Some men, who like all of their household appurtenances to be showy, always deck their wives out in Paris gowns and diamonds before canning them. Other men, of a tightwad type, hold that it is a mere waste of money to spend it on a wife, and they remove all good clothes ideas from their wives before they can them.

This is a painful process for the wife, and leaves it shrunken and unattractive in appearance, but it is efficacious, for no wives are so thoroughly canned as those that have been properly pared down by a parsimonious husband.

However, in either case it is always well to begin by careful rubbing off the bloom of romance from the wife, and the more thoroughly this is done with a hard hand the better.

Then plunge the wife into the icy water of indifference by never noticing how she looks, or taking any interest in what she is doing, or seeing that she has any diversions or amusements.

Vary this by popping her into the boiling water of temper.

Continue this process until you see a frightened look begin to come into the wife's eyes, and it begins to cringe before you like a dog that thinks it's going to be struck. This indicates that the wife is now ready for canning.

Now make a sauce, as follows: To one barrel of ridicule add one gallon of wit, the more undiluted the cruelty of it the better; a pint of the tabasco of caricature, a pint of brininess, throw in a bunch of all the mistakes that your wife has ever made and the foolish things she has done, stir all together, and let it come to a boil. Simmer the wife in this until it hasn't a thought nor an idea left in its system.

N. B.—It is not necessary to put any salt in this dish, as by the time a wife is ready for canning she is so soaked with the brine of her own tears that the plate is almost too highly seasoned for most tastes.

This is an infallible recipe for canning wives, and if faithfully followed never fails. No woman thus treated ever takes herself out of the kitchen or the pantry unless removed by her husband's orders.

As has been said, many married men are very expert in canning wives and like to show off by preparing the dish at their own dinner tables. The only difficulty about it is that canned wife is like home-made welsh rabbit—nobody seems to relish it but the maker.

Also, it sort of takes the appetite for matrimony from such unmarried women as are present on the occasion.

Little Bobbie's Pa

EVERY time I see a dol leaf falling from a tree I feel sad, sed Pa.

You must be a awful gloom this time of the year then sed Ma. The leaves is mostly taking a tumble now. I thought they was sum nuttes wen they was flirting around up in the trees in thare yellow & crimson dresses but they had to go back to the erth from wich they came, Ma sed. Sic transit gloria Sunday, sed Ma, wich meens in English after it has been translated from the Latin, so pass the glories of this world.

You sed it rong, sed Pa, it is sic transit gloria mundi, not Sunday, sed Pa. You got it all rite excep the day of the week. But anyway, as I was saying, every time I see a leef falling to the ground I think sad thoughts. I think of nitey kings that once ruled & all the known world. They ruled & were glorious, but wen the last day calm, Deth, the grate leveller, as sum poet called it, calm just as carelessi like to them as it always cums to us all & sed its time to get up. Wen I see a ded leef fall, Pa sed, I think of how Cleopatry's lusty faded, eeven as the lusty of Lalian Rossoli or Bernhardt must fade sum day. I think of the wunderful wimmen that was so proud in thare lavilinness until they got so they couldent stay thare rite age. I think of the brave knights that fought & then died, sed Pa. I think of Richard the Lion Hartid, & Ivanhoe, & all them gallant men. Thare strength faded from they seven as the ded leef fades & dies & falls.

I like to see the leeves falling, sed Ma. It always makes me think of the butiful Spring to cum, wen other leeves, fresh & green, will cum to talk the place of the leeves that have gone. It makes me think of the butiful vilets that will grow up thru the mud ware the ded leeves have changed to dust, the vilets & the dasies & all the flowers of a new & maybe a grater yeer than any yeer ded & vanished.

But how can you forget so easily, Pa sed, the wunderful grate yare eyes received wen them ded leeves was in thare first Autum glary? No artist cod ever paint a maple forest in October, Pa sed, & maik it half so butiful as Nature. You see all them butiful leeves & they bring you reel joy. Then they die & you forgit them & let them dust to erth & not without a thought of what they have been to you. How like a woman, sed Pa.

Not at all, sed Ma, wimmen are not neerly so forgetful as men. A woman can remember a old romance long after the man has forgotten it. She can remember the sound of her first lover's voice long after her first beau has eeven any idea of who she was. But a woman doesn't live moping in the present, like you looking at yure ded leeves & sighing. She looks ahead & thinks of glorus spring, wich will cum after the hard winter & bring lusty grater than the dying lush-ness of the forests.

You can talk all you want to, sed Pa, a grate sadness clutches my hart wen I look at them falling leeves. See them dropping now, out on the lawn, like snowflakes. Sumthing seems to clutch at my hart like a vise, Pa sed, & maik me un-utterably sad & forlorn.

I bet I know why Pa feels so sad about the falling leeves. It will take two days hard work to rake them up & burn them down. Ma sed I wasent strong enuff to do it.

A Wonderful Town

Lecturing at the London Salon of Photography recently, James Shaw said that the town of Rothenburg, in Bavaria, was a model in the way of municipalities. Every business is on the point of leaving the town, the town itself would guarantee the necessary money in order that the disaster to local industry might be averted. Recently the town had in this manner financed a baby carriage manufactory.

There was neither court house nor a vestige of a slum in Rothenburg, and the laborer, the artisan, the professional man and the nobleman lived next door to each other in the same street.

A Magnificent Fur Cloak

One of the Latest Importations from Paris

The most striking feature this season in fur cloaks for milady is the manner in which leopard skins are being used to set off the main material.

In this picture a leopard skin is draped over the shoulders, producing an effect that no other combination could hope to achieve.

This wrap comes from a Paris fur garment maker who, within the last two seasons, has jumped to the front ranks of originality in style.

This is a wrap that will suit any woman, no matter what her size or physical proportions may be. So subtle, too, is the charm of the leopard skin that its color effect seems to blend with any shade of hair.

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX.

OCTOBER 5.—The architect and I were discussing the width and length of a porch today when I noticed that he was not giving the matter his undivided attention. I followed his eyes and found they were gazing at the pretty nurse who was returning with Manette from a walk in the woods.

She had her arms full of scarlet leaves, and a bit of the color had crept into her cheeks. As she passed my chair, her hand slid down my arm and grazed my pulse, and after lingering there a second reached my hand. My hand closed over hers and I held her thus while we disposed of the dimensions of the porch, and she made no attempts to get away.

It is at such moments when a little tender familiarity from her sets all the blood in my veins madly surging that I almost forget myself and make up my mind to marry her. "A dear, sweet girl," I started to lift her. "Don't," she cried in such alarm I dropped her. "My dear child," I laughed, "I was not thinking seriously of a cave in the woods. I have none there. I wish," holding her tight to me, "that I had, and that we lived now as they lived then, and there would be no hue or cry if I ran off with you."

"It wasn't that that frightened me," pushing away from me. "I was afraid of your heart."

That amused me. "No woman has yet found that it is a bad one," I said. "Never had," earnestly, with her fingers on my pulse, but a little weaker than it should be. Mr. MAX," hesitating, as if debating whether or not she should say it, "you have appeared so well you have deceived me, and I am afraid that you must go slower after this. You see," turning me back toward the house, "your heart isn't as strong as it should be. I noticed it yesterday morning and have sent for a heart specialist."

"He devil you have," I growled.

"I talked it over with Richards, and yesterday, when you were gone, called up Dr. Coy over long distance, and he advised it."

"Why consult me about it now?" somewhat sarcastically.

"You had to be told," she explained. "You know, Mr. MAX," taking a little more rapidly, "I have been a nurse five years and have had all kinds of patients within that time, and never before had any one so considerate of me as you have been. That is why I am particularly interested in you; really, you know, there are moments when I almost love you."

I laughed at that. "There are moments." I replied, "when I almost love you, too."

"The danger," she answered reflectively, "will be when we experience those moments simultaneously."

"Why that word 'danger'?"

"When a woman and a man, who are thrown together in the intimate relationship of a patient and his nurse, love each other at the same time, there is always danger for the woman."

What a pity the day of the cave man has passed! She would make such a pleasant little burden, and I am quite sure my heart would stand the exertion.

FROM ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON'S CHILD'S GARDEN OF VERSE.

In Winter I get up at night
And dress by yellow candle light.
In Summer, quite the other way,
I have to go to bed by day.
I have to go to bed and see
The birds still hopping on the tree,
And hear the grown-up people's feet
Still going past me on the street.
And does it not seem hard to you,
When all the sky is clear and blue,
And I should like so much to play,
To have to go to bed by day?

Money or Merit?

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

"THE lower you go in the scale of refinement the more importance people place upon money and the gorgeous things that represent money, and nothing but money."

I remembered this statement when, in a railroad restaurant, I chanced to sit near a table at which two loud-voiced yet apparently perfectly decent women were seated.

"I wonder," said one, with a glance in my direction to see if I was properly impressed, "if Harold will meet us with the large car or with one of the smaller ones. I suppose he will want to drive himself, instead of allowing either of his chauffeurs to drive."

"I suppose so," replied the other woman, following her lead. "What time is it, my dear?"

"Four o'clock—our train is not ready yet," replied the other, glancing at her watch.

"I left my watch at home today, for it is running slow lately," remarked Number 1.

"Well, I wore my plain gold watch instead of my jewel-encrusted one," said the other. "There are so many diamonds in my jeweled watch that I think it is rather conspicuous for traveling, don't you?"

"Yes," agreed Number 2, "I think that it is. Now, this old pin I have my veil fastened with is real simple and cheap, too—only about $35 or $40, I think it was. Still, it does to wear upon such occasions as this."

"Yet, although you don't approve of such jewelry traveling, I see that you have on a number of your rings," said her companion.

"Oh, only five of them," demurred the other languidly. "I left a dozen of my handsomest rings at home. Yet I am so accustomed to wearing really expensive jewelry that I feel very plain without more than I have with me just now."

This is not an exaggeration, but it actually happened just as I have told it. It reminded me of how, when we were very little girls, we used to talk of the "wonderful balls" we had attended at some fictitious time, expatiating on our "rich and beautiful satins and velvets," knowing all the while that we were lying and had stolen the descriptions badly from such a beloved fairy tale as "Cinderella," or another of its kind. But it impressed the small and literal child to whom we made these mendacious statements. Had our parents known of our yarns we would have had occasion to change our boasting into wailing.

When I, dressed in a plain traveling suit—looking like a brown hen beside these human birds of paradise—heard this conversation, I smiled inwardly with solid enjoyment, for it was truly delicious and entertaining. Yet after the pair had gone to their train I sighed—not only because a source of amusement for myself had been withdrawn—but because the talkers had reminded me how much more money means to some people, how they feel that to have all the money one wants must win for one the admiration and envy of all beholders. The worst of it is that to a certain extent they are right.

It is but natural that we should want money. Think what it means in the way of freedom from fear of want, ability to hear and see the wonderful things of the world, the power to bring happiness and opportunities to those whom we love, to lessen certain kinds of human suffering. But why admire those who have money, yet nothing in themselves that is admirable, and why feel as if such persons were superior to their neighbors? Yet many men and women have that kind of admiration hidden away somewhere. They may deny it, but let us listen for a little while to what they say of certain friends and acquaintances.

"I want you to meet Mrs. A.," says one. "She has a beautiful place up the Hudson, besides her big town house. Her husband is a very successful man." Or, "I spent last Sunday with young Mrs. B. at her country home. You know who she is; her father is John Croesus, who made a fortune ten years ago and has doubled it since then." Or, "Helen C. is one of my dearest friends. She has more money than she knows what to do with, and has just bought a $5,000 car—a stunner." In talking thus do not the speakers tacitly acknowledge that they think the wealth of a person adds to his or her desirability as a friend or acquaintance? To their credit be it said that sometimes they do mention people's intellectual achievements and their goodness, but not always as blatantly as they describe their financial attainments. Is it because they love the tangible wealth more than the equally real, if unseen, graces?

Why should one especially love the person who has money? Perhaps, after all, one does not love him more, but one admires him more because he is rich. Yet why? Surely the possession of wealth does not prove that a man is better than his fellows. It may prove that he has a certain kind of cleverness, but not that he is intellectually the peer of those about him. With financial as with other success what Thackeray wrote is true:

"Fate may change and shift,
The prize be sometimes with the fool,
The race not always to the swift."

Such being the case, it is foolish to speak of the wealthy man as of one who is above his poor neighbor whose intellect, morals and manners are of a higher order than those of the moneyed member of society. Can it be—perish the thought!—that many of us are snobs? If so, let us be intellectual snobs, if we must be any kind. When we recall that many of the greatest and best men the world has ever produced have been poor men, we may speak with less pride of our wealthy acquaintances.

"My dearest friend's husband is many times a multi-millionaire!" declared a rich vulgarian. Although her own husband is rated as a millionaire, she had not brains enough or education enough to see anything ridiculous in her speech!

A BURNING SHIP—A LEAP FOR LIFE—A THRILLING RESCUE

THE SHIP AFIRE

THE CAPTAIN LEAPS LAST

One of the most thrilling and realistic moving picture films ever presented was recently produced abroad by an English company.

For this film a steam freighter, that had been condemned, was used.

First the ship was set on fire. Then scenes were shown of the dreadful panic on board, with the captain leaving the ship last.

Then came the rescuing of the survivors in lifeboats.

All through the film runs a pretty love story, some villainy, and adventure. But all ends well, as it always does—in the "movies."

"DO you mean to say that you learned this fact for the first time today from Sharpe & Smith?"

Philip laughed. He was more than ever sealed to the table, and there was depended to a certain extent on the confidences and gossip of servants. At a dinner on family. No presence of a professional butler and solemn lackeys was discussed with.

"Oh, you lawyers!" he cried. "That's a nice sort of leading question. But, seriously, as a matter of fact, you must answer Yes. My mother's maiden name was Morland. Her mother was much older than she, and it appears that dear woman married to please herself, thereby mortally offending the baronet."

"Why the offense?"

"Because my father's social position was not equal to that of the affluent Morlands. Moreover, her brother had an interest in his people, which rendered him irritable and morose. From time to time a pleasant sort of note, which, indeed, he must have been and he shall say, of my mother's nature, to give him a misanthrope, and gave the life to the classification of Hyams' name. She treated my mother very badly, so there that even she, dear soul, during her married life held no further communication with him, and never mentioned him in me by name. Now, one day on Exmoor he found a lady who was also devoted to beetles. At least, she knew all that the Encyclopedia Britannica could teach her. She was a poor but handsome widow."

"Ah!"

"It is delightful to talk with you, Abingdon. Your commendatory help the narrative along. So Philip married the widow. She brought him a son, aged five. There were no children born of my uncle's marriage."

"Oh!"

"When poverty overtook my dear uncle so far obliterated a cruel memory as to appeal, not once, but many times, to the family relentless of Exmoor, but she was invariably fobbed off either by Lady Louisa Morland or by Messrs. Sharpe & Smith."

"Did they admit this?"

"By no means. I am telling you the facts. I am still on top of the Pyramids."

"Then how did you ascertain the facts?"

"I have in my possession ever since my mother's death the letters they wrote to her. They were fresh in my memory when you and I first met in the Clerkenwell Police Court. That is why the name of Public Morland was grim to me then."

"So I have only heard historical events, events prior to the last 100 years."

"Exactly. My uncle is now sixty years of age. Lady Louisa Morland's son is twenty-four. Her late husband's estate in his life has been to secure him as the barronet's heir. The title, of course, he cannot inherit. But, most unfortunately, he has no penchant for beetles. Indeed Lady Louisa's means have long since diminished in order. Her son's interests are divided between the Sports Club and the cacophony of the latest musical comedy—moths are more in his line, apparently. My uncle, who is preparing a monograph on the fauna which patronize Exmoor wild ponies, came to town last week to visit the British Museum. Unhappily, he heard something about his stepson which disturbed his researches. There was a row."

"Why do you say unhappily?"

Because I, the Keeper into the scratched business on account of it. After a lapse of more than twenty-five years he remembered his sister, went to his solicitors, made a fearful scandal when he heard of letters received from her and assorted address for investigation, and ascertained that she was dead and had a son living. At any rate, these must find that son. They have succeed at my identity for some time. Now they want to make sure of it."

"And what did you say?"

"I told them I would check over the situation and communicate with them forthwith."

"Were they satisfied?"

"By no means. They were exceedingly anxious to educate the old man. They probably counted a good deal of his money."

"Yes."

"Of course. You see the delicacy of their position. After plowing into the records of the family for nearly a quarter of a century they suddenly find the whole situation changed by the merest chance. Indeed discovery that he once had a sister."

"You have not told me all this without a purpose. You want my advice?"

Philip's face was clouded. His eyes downcast. "You understand," he said after a long pause, "that some other the man of the woman—for woman, I think, normally irresponsible for my mother's death. She was poor, miserably horrible poor—the poverty of this clothing and household food. She was ill, confined to a wheelchair based for weary months, and was so utterly unprovided with the barest necessities that the parish doctor was on the point of compelling her to go to the workhouse infirmary when death came. And I to be the instrument of fate's vengeance on this woman!"

Mr. Abingdon, who had risen to light a cigar, placed a kindly hand on the young man's shoulder.

Philip, he said, with some emotion, "I have never yet heard you utter a sentiment which has been good enough for beyond your years. It seems to my speaking you all the severance of such to the old man's sister, and the fact that she has already provided a terrible punishment for him. Lady Louisa Morland. What is the name of her son?"

"I do not know. I forgot to ask."

"Well, there is quite a number of the peerage dukes of London. Hardly a week passed during many years of my life that one or his type did not appear before me in the dock. What is he, a spendthrift, probably a drunkard?"

"All these I gathered from the solicitors."

"And if your mother were living, what would she say to Lady Morland?"

"She would pity her from the depths of her heart. Now, Abingdon, you are right. My uncle's wife has chosen her part and she has got to abide by it. I know where it will. I will write to Messrs. Sharpe & Smith now. But step into my dressing room with me for a moment, will you?"

In the corner of the spacious apartment to which he led his guest stood a large safe. Philip opened it. Within were a number of books and documents, but in a large compartment at the bottom stood a portfolio, plainly for such a repository, an ordinary, leather portmanteau. He lifted it onto a couch and took a key from a drawer in the safe.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

THE way it is in fancy:

Lysander John Appleton and his wife, sitting on opposite sides of the table, with their two children on ottomans at their feet.

The father is telling of an anecdote of his courtship days. The mother blushes and smiles and occasionally helps him with an encouraging nod. The children are enthralled, and when he stops, cry out, "Tell us some more, Daddy dear! Oh, do tell us some more!"

The way it is in fact:

Lysander John dropped his newspaper with a reminiscent sigh and looked over the top of his glasses at his wife reading a book on the other side of the table, then at Daysey Mayme perusing the Helpful Hints in her favorite magazine, and then at his son, aged seven, presumably studying.

"I see," he said, "the newspapers are saying a good deal about Horatio Atkins, Remember, Mother, he was best man at our wedding?"

"Horace Atkins, you mean," replied Mrs. Appleton. "Horatio is his two brother."

"Well, anyway," resumed Lysander John, "it reminds me that the other day I met William—William—oh, what was the name of that man with a saucy moustache we used to know? William—William—what IS his name? You know it as well as you know your own."

No reply from Mrs. Appleton, who had returned to her book.

He turned to his daughter: "You have a girl friend of the same name, Daysey Mayme—William—William—Sandy something, and she was here only last week."

"I can't remember all who were here last week," snippily from the daughter.

"You have been on errands to his house," to his son. "You know who I mean; why don't you say who it is?"

But Chauncey Devere didn't remember her.

"William—William— — It begins with a B— Barker, Black, Barnard, Biddle —B—B—William B— sandy moustache —— Oh," turning to his wife, "you know who I mean. He used to have a fairly good voice. His wife died and he married a second time, and he is so fond of custard pie."

"William Graham," said his wife.

"That's who I mean! Why didn't you say so in the first place?"

"What happened to him?" from his wife, putting down her book with a look of despair.

Up-to-the Minute Jokes

Jigg went to a noted physician to ask advice as to his health. In pompous tones he addressed the doctor:

"I—ah—have come—to—ah—ask you ah—what is—ah—the deuced matter with me—ah?"

"I find your heart is affected," said the physician gravely.

"Oh—ah—anything else—ah?"

"Yes; your lungs are affected, too."

"Anything—ah—else—ah?"

"Yes; your manners are also affected."

They had just moved into a new house and they stood surveying the situation.

"I wish," she said, "that this carpet was velvet."

"I don't," responded the husband unfeelingly; "I wish it was down."

"A woman just can't keep a secret," he declared, opposing a statement.

"Oh, I don't know," contradicted the fluttery lady. "I've kept my age a secret ever since I was twenty-four."

"Yes," he replied, "but one of these days you will give it away. In time you will just simply have to tell it."

"Well," she replied, with confidence, "I think that when a woman has kept a secret for twenty years she comes pretty near knowing how to keep it."

"Why," floundering again, "I met him, and he—he— What was it he said? Sent a message to you about something. Hoped —I remember he hoped— Oh, this was it; he hoped you were well."

Then he returned to his paper, and Mrs. Appleton resumed her reading; but not till there had flashed between mother and children one of those looks which are so uncomplimentary to father.

SAFE-BLOWERS IN ELIOT STREET CARRY OFF $360

A big safe-cracking gang looted the Union Furniture Company on the second floor at No. 31 Eliot street, almost at the back door of Lagrange street police station, was found to have been blown open and all $360 worth of money. The ground floor occupied by the Union Furniture Company is occupied by a restaurant open day and night. The restaurant employes heard no sound during the night of an explosion and noticed nothing.

The robbery was discovered today by Hyman Rosenbloom, manager for the Brighton concern.

Police investigators showed that the burglars had evidently gone up the stairway which ends in No. 31. Finding a light of glass broken in the hall door of the furniture room and out of the door glass could thrust his hand in, slip the catch and gain entrance. The safe, a dresser over the safe, deadened the explosion.

The police were attacked by the mob while McDavid was being taken to jail, but they succeeded in driving back the crowd. For several hours after the negro had been safely lodged in a cell the mob stood around the jail and shrieked its lynching threats.

Wagers, Witticisms and Other Things in Political Field

David Walsh has cancelled a speaking date at Clinton, where Gardner claims he is going to speak the same night, because, he says, "the people should have a chance to hear Mr. Gardner." Which is surely some responsibility. But does Clinton deserve it?

* * *

One of the most popular bets of the campaign seems to be that Gardner will get less than 120,000 votes. Joe Walker has placed a lot of bets at that mark, and has $300 worth of money. The ground floor proposition minimum for Gardner, but under the Union Equitable Company is overruled by a restaurant open day and night. The restaurant employes heard no sound during the night of an explosion and noticed nothing.

* * *

The robbery was discovered today by Hyman Rosenbloom, manager for the Brighton concern.

* * *

Police investigators showed that the burglars had evidently gone up the stairway which ends in No. 31. Finding a light of glass broken in the hall door of the furniture room and out of the door glass could thrust his hand in, slip the catch and gain entrance. The safe, a dresser over the safe, deadened the explosion.

* * *

"Barnum had the greatest show on earth—but Gardner hasn't."

* * *

By the way, Barnum was the man that said the public likes to be humbugged, wasn't he? In a way, Gardner is a little bit like Barnum, at that—for Gardner's campaign speeches indicate that he, too, thinks the voters take kindly to humbuggery.

* * *

Somebody asks, thinking of Gardner, "Can a man be politically laughed and still socially solvent? We answer, "Only if senator Lodge is his pal-in-law.

* * *

Bryan says Wilson has proved his title as an humorist. But aren't humorist people always dead ones?

* * *

The Hon. Senator from Oklahoma charges politics caused a suit now pending against him. The Senator is an able politician himself, and he's used to sharp thrusts in his day, but now he's finding out that it makes a difference whose ox is Gored.

* * *

Governor Foss says the three party platforms are made up of loans stolen from him. But how about that Wilson endorsement plan in the Democratic document?

* * *

After listening to Beveridge talk, four thousand Progressives dedicated $20,000 to their cause. If they had applied the beverage internally, they might have been even more liberal.

* * *

In the tangle for suggestions for the United States District Attorneyship, one welcome whisper comes from Washington—for the lighting that will strike down Lynn way. The man indicated is an able lawyer and an honest man—which is a rare combination, we venture to suggest, not being lawyers ourselves.

* * *

Mayor Burns says you can bunny all you want out in Somerville if you keep your feet on the ground.

* * *

"There is no Middlesex plug," says District Attorney Higgins. "Haven't I just brought a fewwerreckless suit for lumaage against Fatrbairn, my old friend and comrade?"

* * *

The consensus of expert opinion has it that Walsh will win—Bird a bad second. Gardner and Foss fighting it out down below.

* * *

Alvin Bliss of Malden, prominently identified with gas and electric lighting companies, and a member of last year's House, succeeded Representative Wilson. All the opposition he will encounter will be the united strength of the humanitarian and social reform and beloved folk generally. Aside from that, he has easy sailing.

* * *

All Mr. Bliss ever did was to vote against every good bill that came along, and in favor of every bad one.

* * *

We have hitherto remarked that the senatorial fights seem to be either a sure thing or a hopeless chance. One of the sure things is Senator Horgan—a man who had the courage and the humanity to fight the good fight on the good bills that came along, and who is reaping the reward now to the united support for re-election.

* * *

It is interesting to see a recent shift in the betting odds, favoring Charles Sumner Bird as compared to Mr. Gardner. The betters still pick Walsh to win, but many are betting Bird or Gardner—all because of the miserable "show up" of that much-advertised will lop-ah Fanuell Hall.

* * *

That's the reason Walsh gave up that speaking date so suddenly, because figures that if you give Mr. Gardner sufficient rope, he'll—well, eliminate himself, anyway.

* * *

But experts are wrong at least half the time.

TODAYS STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks sold lower today and markets were dull. There was not much selling pressure, but the bears were not at all aggressive. Trading was inert from the start to the close. In the second hour in the Boston market a number of issues grew weaker, including Boston & Maine and American Woolen preferred, and a Maine common closed at 56 off 1, and preferred at 78, off 4 from yesterday, and off 7 in two days. New Haven, Boston Elevated and United Fruit were fractionally lower. Coppers receded as a class, Utah and down a point on a two-share transaction.

Trading totalled only about 75,000 shares in New York and leading issues averaged a little lower. Steel, American Can, American Smelting sold off from a little and Amalgamated, Union Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Southern Pacific and Baltimore & Ohio sustained small losses, finishing fractionally lower.

The New York bank statement for today in brief was as follows:

Loans, decrease $4,000,000; reserves, cash required, $12,815,900; increase, $3,170,000; loans, decrease $4,000,000; specie, decrease, $1,285,000; legal tenders, increase, $445,000; net deposits, decrease, $15,145,000; circulation, increase, $1,000,000. Actual statement: Loan, increase, $6,672,000; specie, increase, $393,000; legal tenders, decrease, $1,160,000; net deposits, decrease, $1,910,000; reserves, decrease, $1,384,100.

New York Opened Lower.

When the New York market opened prices ranged from fractions to points, movement did not indicate especial pressure. There was no sign of liquidation. Lack of demand was the chief reason for the weak tone, traders said. Union Pacific, Reading and Steel declined in early trading and Amalgamated also sold lower. Transactions were almost wholly of a professional character and between floor operators.

There was more concern manifested over the Mexican situation, which was partly due to the reactionary tendency of American stocks on the London market, where relations between the United States and Mexico have great speculative weight. This was reflected in declines in Mexican shares. Most business on foreign exchanges was in preparation for the coming settlement. Speculation was dull abroad as well as in this country and Continental bourses were quiet at the close.

Suit Against American Telephone.

It is stated at Washington that the Department of Justice is to push the prosecution of the "Telephone Trust" and that the battle will be begun in Chicago, where a suit for the dissolution of the American Telephone Company will be filed. But this action is not expected until Congress passes a bill authorizing the appointment of two more federal judges for Chicago, and they have been named. Circuit Judge Kenesaw Wilkerson of Chicago has been in consultation at Washington with department officials, and it is believed the conference was over the proposed suit. In regard to new judges it is said that Attorney General McReynolds will not now investigating conversions of each man whose name had been suggested for appointment, with a view to the purpose of ascertaining his corporation alignments.

"There has been doubt," it is said, "in the minds of officials of the Department of Justice whether the telephone trust is covered by the Sherman anti-trust act. If, when the case is fought out, the decision is that the telephone combination is not a trust, under the meaning of the act, the Government will at once take direct steps to supervise it. This has also come when the Federal ownership of telephone and telegraph lines was under consideration, and will proceed on that basis."

Vanderlip Plan Don't Suit President.

The proposal by President Vanderlip of the National City Bank of New York for a great central bank, whose stock is to be held by the people and which will be entirely under government control, with politics barred from its management, does not appeal to President Wilson and he will not even consider the plan. In fact, friends of the administration think that the Vanderlip proposition is one which will serve to cause delay in passing the Glass-Owen bill, by which the President desires to have it. His attitude was explained in a statement read today:

"When inquiries were made at the White House as to what the President's attitude was toward the proposition of Mr. Vanderlip, of the National City Bank, to the Currency Committee of the Senate, it was stated that he had expressed emphasis, that, of course, the President would not recede in any respect from the position he had already so closely taken and which the whole country understands, and that he was wholly satisfied with the bill as framed and with the main features of the Glass-Owen bill.

"He regards the plan provided for in that bill as excellently suited to the existing conditions of the country and as providing and in every essential particular sound and calculated to render the business men of the country a great and immediate service, and he believes that the early enactment of the bill into law is to be expected, as demanded by the most thoughtful business interests.

"The evidences which have reached him of the support of the country are unmistakable and overwhelming."

Another development is that the members of the Banking Committee, including all the Republicans, and Senators Hitchcock and Hollis, Democrats, are ready to accept the general principles of the Vanderlip plan as a solution of the currency problem yet submitted to the committee, but specific changes in the bill are standing by the administration bill.

The canvass by the National Security Company as to the attitude of all bankers on the measure has so far shown the sentiment of this class to be nearly unanimously against it. So far 297 national banks have expressed views and all except 9 are against unsatisfaction. Bankers want a central bank.

Financial News in Brief.

It is stated in the copper trade that spot metal is commanding 17 cents a pound and that there have been sales at that price.

It is reported that orders on the books of steel producers are running very low and it is feared that the buying for 1914 will be far below expectations.

The Stewart Mining Company reports for the third quarter of this year net earnings of $204,802. A quarterly dividend of 10 per cent, and 2½ per cent extra, was declared on October 5 last.

Manager Charles B. Fay of the Ford branch returned to Boston yesterday after having spent a week at the annual conference of Ford managers and dealers at Detroit. Mr. Fay brings back the information that the Ford plant is running on full schedule and is turning out cars in greater quantities than ever before. The output for the season for all sections of the country is parsing fairly bright and all the managers and dealers predict that 1914 will be a banner year, and a banner year with the Ford people means perhaps more than with the ordinary concern.

FOSS TWINS RECORD AND DEMOCRAT PLANKS

The sixth of the series of political articles by Governor Eugene N. Foss, being published in the AMERICAN, is as follows:

ALL THREE PARTY PLATFORMS INDORSE GOVERNOR FOSS.

The three machine platforms in this State Election (Democratic, Republican, Progressive) are almost entirely borrowed from the policies of Governor Foss. Prove it by reading for yourself the following "deadly parallels." But no one of these three platforms includes ALL the important popular issues which Governor Foss has raised. They all three fall behind the Governor. Isn't it better to elect the man you KNOW will carry on all this good work? Why experiment?

ATTENTION: DEMOCRATS!

DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM INDORSES GOVERNOR FOSS.

WHERE GOVERNOR FOSS STANDS.

"The Democratic Party stands for the complete separation of the Boston & Maine and the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad corporations, and the absolute divorce of steam railroads, street railways and competing steamboat lines."

Governor Foss vetoed the bill which gave the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad the right to lease the Boston & Maine. He signed the bill which separated the two companies and passed this reformatory law (see Sections 15 and 16 of Chapter 784 of Acts of 1913) over the Governor's veto. Let the voter consider the difference between the Governor who does things, and a machine that makes promises only to break them.

Governor Foss has secured nine million dollars for the development of the Port of Boston, and further enlargement of the facilities for harbors and rivers. His program has succeeded, and the principal steamship lines of Europe are now sending ships to the Port of Boston. Other Democratic Governors failed.

"We favor the development of harbors and waterways to reduce the cost of transportation."

Governor Foss' efforts to consolidate our State Commissions have been opposed by both the Democratic and Republican machines.

"All public utilities should be placed under strict supervision and control of the Public Service Commission."

This is an endorsement of Governor Foss' views. But the Governor has gone further and instructed the Public Service Commission to investigate the railroad, lobby, under the direction of political machines, including the Democratic machine.

"An unscrupulous and unregulated lobby is indefensible and intolerable."

This is a quotation from Governor Foss' first inaugural message.

Upon this issue Governor Foss confidently rests upon the record of progressive measures for the farmer.

"We demand the adoption of the Initiative and Referendum."

Credit Unions are already lawful in Massachusetts. The only obstacle who can be counted upon to secure financial advantages for our agricultural communities is Eugene N. Foss.

"This State should encourage agriculture and dairying, particularly by calling the attention back to the rural sections and by freeing the farmer from unjust burdens and discriminations, and from unrestricted competition with unlicensed milk from other States."

Governor Foss has advocated and signed more progressive legislation on these lines than was ever before enacted under any Governor.

"Agricultural credit facilities for the benefit of the farmer, either by national or State action, should be established. Agricultural credit unions, should be provided."

Governor Foss has advocated and secured the creation of a Commission on Country Life, and signed a law requiring towns and cities to establish credit banks.

"We favor further legislation to insure to the citizens the purity of food and drugs and the correctness of weights and measures."

This is an endorsement of Governor Foss' position and of his success in securing the conviction of wholesale violators of the pure food and State purchasing agencies.

"The State should promote by appropriate legislation advanced planning of the development of cities and towns, and should encourage the movement for suburban homes for workmen."

"We favor the consolidation and abolition of commissions, and the establishment of a central purchasing agency for all state institutions."

Governor Foss' efforts to reform our present methods of caring for the insane have been supported by the Democrats. The bill which he proposed from the start to both the Republican and Democratic conventions, to abolish the contracts for supplies to these institutions are vigorously opposed.

"We believe in the abolition of the Executive Council."

"Our cities should keep home rule."

"We favor the principle of party councils, subject to a local referendum."

"Bureaucratic control should be abolished."

"We believe that the question of equal suffrage should be submitted to the vote of the people."

"The Commonwealth should provide additional hospital accommodations for its mental ills through the erection of cottages for the chronic insane, that they may be cared for in their homes, and should have in its employ in such institutions none but trained and experienced citizens."

"The State Commission on Economy and Efficiency should be given power to investigate county affairs."

Governor Foss has gone further than this and demanded not only an investigation of county affairs, but the consolidation of the county departments under the State Board of Prison Commissioners.

"The State Commission on Economy and Efficiency should be given power to investigate county affairs."

Governor Foss has gone further than this and demanded not only an investigation of county affairs, but the consolidation of the county departments under the State Board of Prison Commissioners.

"The people must have equal opportunity with the rich to secure justice. We favor a reform of the jury system."

Governor Foss has gone further than this and demanded not only an investigation of county affairs, but the consolidation of the county departments under the State Board of Prison Commissioners.

"Those reforms are already on the statute books [illegible] through the personal efforts of Governor Foss."

Those reforms are already on the statute books through the personal efforts of Governor Foss.

"The great bulk of this platform is taken from my own messages to the Legislature and speeches to the people."

"Through the courtesy of the AMERICAN we have shown that ALL THREE PLATFORMS—DEMOCRATIC, PROGRESSIVE and REPUBLICAN—are COMPLISHED.

Ross Will Reveals Family Pensions

Railroad Magnate Provides for Continuance of $100,000 Roll.

Although the will of James Ross of Montreal, the largest stockholder in the Canadian Pacific Railroad, has not been filed for probate, it has been revealed that one of the provisions of the will is that his executors and heirs shall carry on the same system of assisting his associates and their families that he had inaugurated during his lifetime without any outside supporting it.

It has been discovered that the pension roll of James Ross was about $100,000 per annum to members of families associated with the work in his enterprises during and without competition. His directions in the will are that the trustees or executors shall continue the pension roll.

Rescuers Brave Dangers at Dawson

DAWSON, N. M., Oct. 25.—In depths of shaft No. 2 of the Stag Canon Company's coal mines today government rescuers braved a blazing damp and danger from falling walls again in an effort to bring the bodies of the remaining 262 victims of the explosion. Sixty-nine bodies had been brought to the surface yesterday. Only twenty-three of the 284 men in the mine were alive. Volunteer rescuers refused to enter the mine today, in response to the appeals of the women of the town, who pointed out the danger of another explosion bringing out the entire male population of Dawson.

In England a Jew Is Made Lord Chief Justice—In Russia Jews Are Slandered, Butchered and Driven Out

Let the Jew Haters Learn a Lesson by Contrasting Civilization and Prosperity in England with Conditions in Russia.

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company.

Rufus Isaacs, a Jew, is Lord Chief Justice of England.

Mendel Beilis, a Jew, is locked up, probably tortured, and his death on perjured accusations is planned in Russia.

In England the power and genius of the Jews are honored and utilized for the benefit of the empire.

In Russia, the religion of the Jews is made a pretext for vile murder. And the brutal dregs of the population, sunk in drunkenness and superstition, are kept happy by being permitted to murder Jews—that they may not turn and destroy the government that thrives on their degradation.

There are not a few men in this country calling themselves civilized that are Jew haters as bitter as the Czar himself or the vilest man of his police force.

Let Jew haters look at the picture on this page.

This is the lesson for the Jew hater to learn, as he contemplates England and Russia in the twentieth century.

The nation that has the intelligence to utilize the good in men and in races is the nation that prospers.

And the nation sunk in medieval degradation, that destroys what it hates and does not understand, is the nation that sinks lower and lower—to the inevitable end of revolution, anarchy and reorganization that awaits Russia.

The story that this picture tells is much older than the present movement toward intelligent recognition of equality in the British Empire.

The Jews in England were freed from this last "disability" and the right to sit in Parliament conferred upon them only half a century ago.

Millions of men living remember when Disraeli stood in the English House of Commons, despised and assailed as a Jew, philosophically looking down upon the half drunken Tories who attacked him and saying: "Gentlemen, the day will come when you will listen to me."

The day did come, when England selected the Jew Disraeli to represent the empire at the conference at Berlin, and when that Jew came back bringing to England "peace with honor" and incidentally considerable valuable territory.

The elevation of Sir Rufus Isaacs to his high post, the most important judgeship in England, is the full expression of England's perception of the value OF THE JEWISH PEOPLE AND THE JEWISH GENIUS.

You must go as far back as the day when Cromwell cut off the head of Charles the First to realize what the Jews have done for the British Empire and what brutal treatment of them has meant to other nations.

In the seventeenth century, when Cromwell had power, he asked himself first of all, "What does England need?" He knew that a commercial nation needed men that UNDERSTOOD COMMERCE.

At that time persecution and torture were inflicted upon Jews in countries that were hotbeds of superstition, blind fanatical ignorance and hatred—such as is Russia now.

From Spain and Portugal especially the Jews were driven, and in both of those countries they were submitted to persecution and unbelievably atrocious torture.

As they were driven from Spain and from Portugal, they were received by Cromwell in England.

The gradual decay and degradation of Portugal and Spain, the marvellous prosperity of England, since Cromwell's day, ought to teach a lesson to the Jew hater.

If Russia were not too stupid, drunken and degraded to read history or anything else intelligently, she would know that in cutting the throats of the Jews she is really cutting the throat of her own national prosperity.

She is planning through the persecution of one harmless Jew the murder of thousands of others, based on race hatred.

She has succeeded in driving from her territory Jews THAT IF PERMITTED WOULD GIVE PROSPERITY, COMMERCIAL LIFE, MANUFACTURING ACTIVITY TO THAT COUNTRY.

She will learn a bitter lesson too late.

Her misfortune will be the GOOD fortune of other lands, intelligent enough to do in the twentieth century what Cromwell did in the seventeenth century—intelligent enough to realize that men of power of every kind are needed in a great nation, and to welcome gladly those that have developed the capacity to think, plan and patiently organize for four thousand years.

Beilis will not be executed. That particular conspiracy, that shameful revival of the false "blood accusation," will fail.

But as a result of the agitation, tens of thousands of Jews will be driven from their homes—AND RUSSIA WILL SINK ONE STEP LOWER IN PROSPERITY AND IN CIVILIZATION.

One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XLII.

MARY FLETCHER had been a widow for a year before she again heard from Gordon Craig. Meanwhile she had secured a position in an uptown office in which her conscientious work and keen interest in her duties were soon recognized. It was not until after her husband's death that she knew that, years before, Bert had had his life insured in his mother's name for a thousand dollars. He wished to let this lapse after his marriage, but his mother had kept up the payments on it, saying nothing about it to her daughter-in-law.

This sum enabled the two women to move from the tenement in which they were living and take as small a flat and one almost as cheap in a neighborhood where there was less squalor and more pure air. Here the little boy flourished under his grandmother's judicious care.

Then, at the end of this first year of her widowhood, she met Gordon Craig again upon the street. He glanced inquiringly at the black dress which Mary had donned—not because of grief for her husband, but because she felt that black was a safe and proper garb for a woman situated as she was. She told herself that in her heart she was mourning for the happiness she had lost and for the wrong she had done in marrying where she did not love. Craig asked for her address, but she gave it only when he begged that he might bring his little girl to see her.

"My mother has her here on a visit to me," he explained, "and I want you to know my small daughter."

The second time that Craig called with his child, Mrs. Fletcher, senior, and the boy were out, for it was a lovely Sunday afternoon. Mary was tired and preferred, she said, to stay at home. She did not mention that Craig had sent a line to her at her office saying that he would call this afternoon. As Mary lifted his woman-child to her lap she felt a throb of mother-love for the little girl that made her gather her closely in her arms and kiss her. Craig, watching the pair, spoke quickly.

"Mary?" he pleaded. "See, how my little girl loves you! And, dear, I love you, too."

But she checked him by a gesture. "Please don't, Gordon!" she begged. "All that kind of thing is over for us forever."

He was not to be so easily silenced. "Dear," he said, "won't you believe that, after all we have both gone through, it is possible for the great love I once had for you to return? Why, Mary, the first time I saw you here in New York, looking so pale and sad, I knew that I loved you—in fact, that I had always loved you."

She lifted her grave eyes to his. "But what about me?" she asked. "I may not love you now."

Yet the man begged. He told her he was lonely, that he needed her. He was satisfied with the feeling of friendship which he knew she had for him. Was there anyone else she loved?

No, there was nobody else, she replied, and Craig caught eagerly at this admission.

"I could make you love me," he said.

Again she checked him. "Gordon," she said, "I married once without true love, and were I to sin in this way a second time I feel there would be no forgiveness for me. I know that life with you would mean peace, home, freedom from care. But as I am not sure that I love you, I must not see you any more."

All the man's protests failed to change her point of view. As he rose to go he spoke very gently.

"Mary," he said, "see here, dear. I have carried in my pocket all these years the little coin I gave you once. Do you remember it?"

As the woman looked down at the silver piece bearing her initials and his the tears rushed to her eyes, but she did not speak.

"Please, dear," he said, "take this—and if my prayers should ever be answered and you should find that you love me—please send this back to me and I will understand. Will you do this?"

"Yes," she whispered.

Six months later Bert Fletcher's mother passed out of the life that he had made so hard for her. Mary knew that her mother-in-law was glad to go, but she missed sadly the blunt and sincere woman who had been so good to her and her boy.

The lonely young mother engaged a good maid to stay with her little son during the first few months after his grandmother's death. Mary did not look forward beyond the present. She seemed to be waiting for something that was coming into her life. She did not let herself think what it might be, but ever since her last talk with Gordon Craig she had known that the love she had thought dead had been only sleeping. Still she sent him no sign of the knowledge that had come to her.

Then, on one beautiful April morning she got a letter in the familiar handwriting. The messenger who brought it was told to wait for an answer. With the letter was a box of pansies.

"Do you know, dear," Gordon wrote, "that this is the anniversary of the day on which we first met, years ago? It is Spring again, dear heart. And the pansies—for thoughts—are here once more. I love you. Cannot you send me just a sign that on this day of days you, too, remember?"

Mary bent her head and laid her cheek for an instant against the pansies' velvet faces. Then, as once before, she unfastened a slender chain from about her neck, drew from it a silver coin, and kissed swiftly the initials on one side of this. Laying it and a great yellow pansy between the folds of a sheet of paper, she slipped the paper into an envelope, sealed it securely and took it into the hall where the messenger waited.

"Give this to Mr. Craig, please," she said, "and be very careful not to lose it!"

The End.

AMERICAN Thanked for Editorials on Russian Persecutions

FROM THE SOUTH END YOUNG MEN'S HEBREW ASSOCIATION

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—At a meeting of the South End Young Men's Hebrew Association held on October 19 it was

Resolved, That a protest be entered condemning the attitude of the Russian government in encouraging the most outrageous of plots to incite race hatred, encouraging the most villainous and infamous conspiracy that could ever be conceived by superstition, bigotry, fanaticism and race hatred.

Be it further resolved, That the most heartfelt thanks be extended the Boston AMERICAN for the extended publicity accorded the Mendel Beilis case; in taking the initiative and rousing the people of the entire State to vigorously protest against such an outrageous injustice.

Yours truly,

THE COMMITTEE.

FROM THE UTOPIAN CLUB OF GREATER BOSTON.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—The Utopian Club of Greater Boston, at a meeting held Sunday, October 19, 1913, unanimously passed the following resolution:

Be it resolved that this club go on record condemning the Russian government for its persecution of Mendel Beilis and its fanatical charge and trial of ritual murder.

Be it resolved that this club commend the stand taken by the Boston AMERICAN, and its noble efforts to awaken and enlighten the public in the cause of justice and humanity. President, ED. H. CARSON, secretary, CELIA J. NEVELSON, ANNA B. BENJAMIN, IRVING RUBY, MAURICE KAPLAN, committee.

THE CAUSE OF JUSTICE

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—It is pleasing indeed to see the Boston AMERICAN taking up the cause of justice in the Mendel Beilis case in Russia.

It is all glorious that such should be, and may Russia feel the weight of protest as it is being made in this country as against a prejudical enmity to a race.

What Russia might do, with no discredit to herself, would be to allow the Jews, as in America, to go where they please, free to exalt ambition, free to be as men should be. She would then realize that it would be more to her credit than as now to her discredit.

Boston. MAX HENRY NEWMAN.

Back to the Dark Ages in Russia

By REV. C. F. AKED, D. D.

A SUPERSTITION of the Dark Ages dies hard—even in the light of the twentieth century. A Jew is charged with the murder of a Christian; his object—blood for the Passover feast. The charge is familiar to every reader of history, but it is passing strange in our modern American ears. Kiev, Russia, is a city of more than three hundred thousand inhabitants. It has every appearance of being civilized. It has a university with more than twenty-five hundred students, a university equipped with observatories, laboratories, libraries and museums. The university courses are open to women—a fact which seems to speak of a city not wholly sunk in barbarism—and the educational and scientific institutions of the city rank next in importance to those of St. Petersburg and Moscow.

And in Kiev, in the dawn of the twentieth century, this mediaeval lie invades the halls of justice and guides the brain of the public prosecutor!

Lie Never Rested

Nobody knows the origin of this mediaeval superstition. Historical research wanders fruitlessly in the centuries earlier than the twelfth. I cannot put my hand on a case previous to 1144. From that time onward the lie never rested; and century by century it did its hellish work. I suppose it is not necessary to say that there is no case on record which supplies proof—as we understand proof—that any Jew in the world ever committed murder for the sake of obtaining Christian blood to be used in his Passover worship. But the name of the Jews who have been slaughtered for this imaginary crime is "Legion." Multitudes of men and women have been done to death amid tortures unspeakable because their persecutors believed, or professed to believe, these atrocious lies.

Chaucer has the story of little Hugh of Lincoln in his "Canterbury Tales." Reduced to plain prose, and checking off the poet by references to the historian, it comes to this. In the year 1255 a boy of eight years of age was lost. The mother searched for him and the neighbors helped. His body was found in a well near to the house of a Jew. The man was arrested and promised his life if he would accuse his brethren of the murder. He did so, but was treacherously hanged for his pains. Nearly a hundred of the richest Jews in Lincoln were charged with complicity in the murder of little Hugh. The richest Jews in Lincoln—if you please! There was some method in this mediaeval madness.

Torturing for Money

The property of these Jews was confiscated to the king's exchequer; the accusers, doubtless, intercepting a good portion of it on its way there. Eighteen Jews were hanged in Lincoln. The others were kept in the Tower of London, the sentence of death hanging over them, the hope, being, of course, that more money might be extracted from them alive than dead. Thirty-five of them were released, it is said, through the intervention of the Franciscans acting on behalf of wealthy Jews in England concerned for their brethren in distress. What became of the remaining thirty-nine is unknown. Whether they died in prison or were one by one released, broken in body and in mind and reduced to beggary, the twentieth century does not know because the thirteenth century did not care. What were thirty-nine amongst the myraids of Jews slaughtered by greed using race prejudice and religious hate to mask a hideous lust of gold!

But Kiev! And the year nineteen thirteen! One turns again to that glorious story "The Promised Land," by Mary Antin. Born and brought up in one of the "cities of the Pale" in Russia, a little Jewish girl in her early teens, not knowing a word of English, is brought to America, the Promised Land. At thirty years of age she is a cultivated and deeply patriotic American woman, writing one of the best books about America ever written. And here is Mary Antin's report of her encounter with this mediaeval superstition when she was still Maryashe in a Russian Ghetto:

Mary Antin's Story

"Another thing the Gentiles said about us was that we used the blood of murdered Christian children at the Passover festival. Of course that was a wicked lie. It made me sick to think of such a thing. I knew everything that was done for Passover, from the time I was a very little girl. The house was made clean and shining and holy, even in the corners where nobody ever looked. *  * And when I asked the Four Questions, about the unleavened bread and the bitter herbs and the other things, did I not know all about Passover, and what was on the table, and why? It was wicked of the Gentiles to tell lies about us. The youngest child in the house knew how Passover was kept."
